FLASH GUIDES RESCUERS TO LOST FLIERS

Vessel Three Miles Off Awaits Dawn On Pacific To Find Fliers

By International News Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—Four reddish flares, reported by the mate and lookout of the freighter West Sequana, came early today as the most hopeful omen in the four-day search for the lost Dole planes, Golden Eagle and the Miss Doran.

Three of the flares were reported to have been sighted by the West Sequana shortly after midnight, Pacific Coast time (4 a. m. today, Pittsburgh daylight time). A fourth flare was seen about 4:20 a. m. (8 a. m. Pittsburgh time), the freighter reported.

The flares shot into the sky from a point about three miles off the steamer's starboard bow, the wireless messages reported. The West Sequana was standing by until daylight to investigate the source of the rockets.

It was not believed that the missing "Dallas Spirit," the rescue plane could have gone down at that place.

The position of the West Sequana at midnight, Pacific Standard time (4 a. m. Pittsburgh daylight time), when it sighted the flare, was given as approximately 250 miles west of San Francisco and 70 miles north of the great circle route to Honolulu.

NO TRACE IN ISLANDS.

HONOLULU, Aug. 20.—Mercantile ships and naval seaplanes early today had searched nearly all Hawaiian waters without finding the slightest trace of the Miss Doran and the Golden Eagle, Dole race entrants three days overdue in Honolulu and without doubt either wrecked or helpless.

Submarines have investigated the windward side of all the islands except Kauai, while seaplanes have rounded Cahua and most of Maui and Molokai. Submarines also searched the waters between the islands of Maui, Hawaii and Kahoolawe.

Meanwhile other naval vessels are

Dallas Rescue Plane Falls in Tail Spin; Radios Final S.O.S.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Ships at sea rushed under forced draught early today to a spot approximately 590 nautical miles west from San Francisco where the airplane Dallas Spirit last night sent out an S.O.S. call after it had gone into two successive tail spins. Approximately 25 ships were steaming over the great circle route in search of the plane.

The radio of the Dallas Spirit, which left Oakland airport at 2:15 p. m., coast time, yesterday (6:15 p. m. Pittsburgh daylight time) to search for the missing Dole fliers, was silent after the frantic distress calls, and it was believed that the plane had fallen into the sea.

The U. S. Destroyers Lavellette and Sumner were believed to be the vessels nearest the Dallas Spirit. The Lavellette and the Sumner were reported 108 miles East of the airplane's last known position at 9:10 o'clock last night. (1:10 a. m. Pittsburgh daylight time.)

The destroyers Hazelwood, Meyers and the aircraft tender Langley were hurrying to the rescue.

The tanker Frank G. Drum was reported 230 miles from the spot, proceeding at full speed.

The steamer Pleidon, bound from Auckland, New Zealand, to San Francisco, moved under forced draught to reach the plane's position at 11 o'clock last night, the Radio Corporation was notified by the captain.

The Pleidon headed for latitude 33.16 and longitude 133.50 on the estimate that the plane would be in that position when it went into the spin, basing this figure on an estimate of 83 nautical miles an hour from the time of the last position given by the Dallas Spirit.

3 OF FAMILY DROWN IN AUTO CRASH

CAR DIVES 6 FEET IN CREEK

A berry picking party ended fatally for three members of the family of Michael Antion, 55, Bridgeville, when the auto truck in which they were riding slipped off the Bridgeville-Clifton road, dropped down a six-foot embankment and pinned the occupants in two feet of water. All were drowned.

Antion and his two daughters, Virginia, 13, and Sylvia, 9, left their home in Bridgeville at 6 o'clock this morning to pick berries. Two hours later Mrs. Mary Snyder, farmer, telephoned to Chief of Police A. S. Brosek, Bridgeville, and reported finding the wrecked auto in McLaughlin Lan, which traverses her farm.

When the police from Bridgeville arrived and lifted the auto, the bodies of the three were found in the creek, which is not more than two feet deep.

Antion, a peddler, leaves a wife and four children.

En route to a spring house, William Snyder, 12, son of Mrs. Snyder, was attracted by a bright light showing in the run. He found the overturned automobile, and other members of the family hurried to the scene and saw the clothing of one of the girls floating on the water.

There is a sharp curve in the road where the accident occurred, and it is believed Antion drove off the road in the dense fog which enveloped the valley.

SIRENS BANNED BY AUTO CODE, MARSH POINTS OUT

Use of siren compression horns or spark plug whistles is held to be unlawful under the provisions of the new state vehicle code, Burton W. Marsh, city traffic engineer, points out for the benefit of fleet owners and drivers of private vehicles who may be contemplating the purchase of such devices. Such horns which already are in use in Pittsburgh will have to be removed January 1.

DOUBT OVER IDENTITY

ARRESTED IN JAIL BREAK

Paul Jaworski and John Vasbinder, Thursday, according to Theodore Steinbrenner, jail guard, who identified pictures of him this morning. Two women, Margaret Taylor and Mary Cavanaugh, county employes, who saw the escape, are certain Wisnewski was not the liberator who aided the murderers.

WITNESSES DIVIDE ON CAPTIVE

The assertion of two women that Paul Wisnewski, 31, of Wheeling, W. Va., is not the man who led Paul Jaworski and Jack Vasbinder in their escape from the county jail, today weighs against a pile of evidence, including two positive identifications by men that pointed certainly to Wisnewski as the jail-break leader.

Wisnewski, in the county jail under heavy guard, was identified by Theodore Steinbrunner, jail guard, and Paul Beiswenger, bookkeeper there. They were positive. Warden John McNeil said that the prisoner was the man who had made frequent visits at the jail. And other evidence pointed strongly to the Wheeling man.

Then came Margaret Taylor, jail matron and a former policewoman, and Mary Cavanaugh, courthouse operator, both of whom had a good look at the man who made possible the break for freedom by the murderers. And both women said emphatically that Wisnewski was not the man.

Steinbrunner was the first witness of the jail battle who saw Wisnewski after the latter had been brought here from the West Virginia city by local county detectives. His arrest there followed an identification of his picture by one of the guards wounded in the jail battle.

Wisnewski, at first refusing to talk, later made a denial of any part in the escape of the men here. "I worked in a steel mill in Wheeling on Thursday," he told Jail Warden John McNeil.

The second development in the nation-wide hunt for the men was a report from Detroit police that the Michigan license number, 417-649, reported to have been on the Chrysler

FIRE SWEEPS POMEROY, 13 BUILDINGS RAZED

POMEROY, O., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Fire starting from a short circuit in an automobile parked in the livery stable of John Pradie destroyed 13 business establishments, two residences and the office of County Prosecutor E. H. People before being brought under control early today. Damage to the buildings was estimated at $200,000.

One man, Louis Stevens, a volunteer fireman, was cut about the face and arms by flying glass.

Among the buildings destroyed were the livery stable, Meyers' clothing store, Hoover Brothers' general store, Horst bottling shop, Burson Hardware Company, Summers' shoe repair shop, Sergeant's restaurant, Star Tailor shop, Ewing's undertaking establishment, David Wessel's hardware store, Pomeroy "Democrat," Oscar Myers' tea shop and residence and the Gas Supply shop.

Aid was summoned from nearby towns. When the Gallopolis fire department arrived the water supply failed and dynamiting was resorted to to stop the march of the flames.

THUGS AFRAID, SHOOT UP HILLTOP SHOP, RUN

Three armed bandits frightened several children, fired two wild shots and apparently unnerved, fled empty-handed after attempting to hold up the grocery store of Frank C. Mahler, 618 Beltzhoover avenue.

Three pistols were displayed as the bandits, all described as being young, entered the store. Several children in the place screamed, and two shots rang out. Both bullets were imbedded in the walls of the store. Then, before the proprietor realized the holdup had been attempted, the bandits had dashed from the store.

Several persons saw them jump into a sedan parked outside the store and speed toward the downtown district.

Balked In NewSacco Plea

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti were unable to file a petition for review of their conviction of murder in the Supreme Court today because the papers presented were held to be not in satisfactory form, no records of the case being presented.

Michael A. Musmanno, acting for the condemned men, left with the clerk the papers he had brought with him, which included two petitions, one to bring up for review the case as developed before the Supreme Court of Massachusetts and the other for a review of the action of the Superior Court. He also left at the clerk's office filing fees for the two cases and promised that the records in both would be here early next week.

The Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation scored against striking coal miners today. A temporary injunction restraining miners from picketing on the property of the corporation was served on officers of the United Mine Workers this morning, according to P. T. Fagan, president of District No. 5.

Fair tonight and Sunday; slowly rising temperature.

S. O. S. CUTS OFF DALLAS RADIO LOG

The flight of Capt. William Erwin and A. H. Eichwaldt in the Dallas Spirit began at 2:15 p. m. yesterday without mishap.

As the ship struck the San Francisco waterfront Eichwaldt started sending out messages on his 33.1-meter radio set, with which the plane was equipped especially for the rescue flight.

"Going strong. We are passing the docks. Will see the lightship soon," flashes the navigator. "We are carrying the tail high at 1,700 and are making close to 100 miles per hour air speed. Will call again when passing lightship.

Five minutes later this came:

"We are now passing the lightship and see the two flag signals which means that you bums are getting us and we can see the Farallone islands ahead.

Then followed perhaps the most dramatic radio story ever told.

"4:20 P. M.—We just passed close to a rain squall. The air is a little bumpy in its vicinity. We soon left it behind, however. Very clear ahead."

4:35 p. m.—We adjusted antenna for more radiation. The visibility is very good. We are able to cover an 80-mile patch.

5:04 p. m.—We see a ship ahead of us. Presumably the Mana. We will go down to wave to them.

5:11 p. m.—Just passed the S. S. Mana and dipped in salute. They answered on the whistle. Of course we could not hear it but we saw the steam.

5:36 p. m.—At five-thirty we are passing a vessel that has the appearance of an oil tanker on the north of us and two minutes later we see another craft south of us. We can see smoke from still another steamer south of us.

5:45 p. m.—Just saw a rum runner on the left and had a hard time keeping ike in.—BILL.

5:48 p. m.—Just passed a destroyer going towards San Francisco. The destroyer was too far away for us to make out his number. Nothing else in sight.

5:57 p. m.—We are now about to have supper. Will call you again after supper.

6:05 p. m.—Please tell the gentleman who furnished our lunch that it is fine, but we can't find the toothpicks.—BILL.

"6:54 p. m.—Just had a sandwich apiece and cup of coffee and it sure went good. We changed course at 6:40 p. m. (Pacific time) to 244½ true. Position at that time latitude 35 degrees 30 minutes north; 130 degrees west."

machine in which the prisoners sped away, had been on a machine in a Flint (Mich.) garage for the last four days.

Wisnewski was arrested at a Main street rooming house in Wheeling by local county detectives who went there and obtained the assistance of police.

When placed under arrest, the suspect said: "Well I don't know why you want me, but I guess it is because Jaworski got out of jail." On his trip back to Pittsburgh in an automobile with county detectives, he refused to talk. All questions were met with a blank stare and an occasional nod of the head.

Wisnewski, detectives say, answers the description of the "outside man" who led the escape in every detail except one—he does not have a mustache. The man who provided the automatics and headed the flight of the prisoners in their break for freedom had a small mustache.

Wisnewski was first pointed at as a suspect when it was reported that he had been seen in Pittsburgh Thursday. Several months ago he was released from the county jail after serving a 15-month sentence.

Wisnewski, brought here by Detectives John Geisler, James Reddington, Michael Stabile and Albert Shedlock, was placed in the county jail under heavy guard. Prison attaches and others who saw the three men when they fled from the jail will view him today for possible further identification.

All last night city and county officers probed clues reported by citizens anxious to aid in the capture and secure the $15,000 reward offered for the arrest of the three men. But none of the reports were found to have foundation.

Fists Fly In Ward Fight

Fists flew in the first skirmish in the battle for control of the Second Ward, where the city administration and the Leslie faction have locked horns, which was staged last night in front of the Penn avenue Police Station.

Four men were arrested. Two of them, Stanley Oskrowski, 2308 Mulberry alley, and Charles Martin, 2329 Penn avenue, are supporters of "Eddie" Kenna, head of the county road bureau, who is trying with the help of the Leslie following in the ward to re-elect his brother Barney constable. The others were Richard Conners, 316 Penn avenue, and Michael McMackin, 2420 Penn avenue, friends of P. J. O'Malley, who is leading the city administration's fight to dethrone Barney Kenna and elect James J. McManus in his place.

J. F. Sullivan put up $25 bonds for Conners and McMackin, both of whom appeared this morning before Magistrate John Orie and paid $5 fines. "Eddie" Kenna furnished the bonds for Oskrowski and Martin, neither of whom showed up at the hearing.

The weather is still cloudy over the Atlantic Coast States, and light showers were general yesterday afternoon and last night throughout that section. Cloudy and showery conditions have developed over the Canadian Northwest and over the vicinity of the Panhandle of Texas.

The temperature changes were slight, and we may expect the fair conditions to continue for the next several days.

Cook Who Slew Wife At Sea Gets 10 Years

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—A Negro sea cook today awaited removal to Atlanta prison to begin serving a 10-year sentence for the murder of his wife aboard the schooner Kingsway, while Federal authorities turned their attention to another alleged killing on the high seas for which a ship's stewardess is accused.

While a jury in Federal Court last night returned a second degree murder verdict against Earl Battice, 24, for the fatal slashing of his wife, Lucia, Federal authorities had started machinery in motion to bring to trial Mrs. Mary Waits, 32-year-old widow, accused of killing the refrigerating engineer on the steamer American Trader.

Battice contended he killed his wife because she accepted the advances of Karl Badke, donkey engine tender on the schooner, who is now awaiting trial on charges of mutiny growing out of the weird cruise of the Kingsway from the African gold coast to New York.

The government charged the cook killed his wife to be free to marry Emily Zamot, his 18-year-old Porto Rican sweetheart.

Authorities had not ended their fight to punish Battice before they arrested Mrs. Waits on her arrival from England on the liner President Roosevelt. The warrant said that "inspired by the devil and without the fear of God before her eyes," she poured acid on Louis Fisher, with the result that he "languished and died."

FIRST BIRDS, NOW GUNS KEEP VILLAGERS AWAKE

OLEAN, N. Y., Aug. 20.—Blackbirds, thousands of them, are making life miserable for residents of Gowanda, a village near here.

Every night the birds came in large flocks to roost in the trees along the village streets. The cawing and whirr of wings kept the citizens awake at night for weeks. Village officials appealed to the U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey for relief and were advised to use shotguns. Now the gunning is keeping the citizens up all night.

Flying School Ma'am Took Inspiration From Lindy

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Miss Mildred Doran, the young Michigan school teacher, who took off for Honolulu last Tuesday in quest of the distinction of being the first woman to make a trans-oceanic flight, took her inspiration from Charles Lindbergh.

Her initiative was responsible for the entry of the biplane in the race; her determination gave her pilot and navigator the impetus to make a second start after the plane had been forced back in the Dole race on account of engine trouble.

Miss Doran's flying hours were few, compared with the records of J. A. Pedlar, her pilot, and V. R. Knope, her navigator.

William Malloska, Michigan millionaire and an old friend of the Doran family, heard Miss Doran tell of her ambition to fly the Pacific and he offered to finance the expedition.

Hold Negro As Slayer of Woman

GALLIPOLIS, O., Aug. 20.—Eddy Peppers, 21, Negro hotel porter here, confessed early today that he killed Mrs. Florence Buck last Monday morning, it was announced by police. According to his alleged confession, Peppers said he had used a wet towel to strangle his victim.

Fearing mob violence from friends of the slain woman's relatives who reside in Mason county, West Virginia, across the Ohio River from here, Peppers was taken in an automobile to Chillicothe and placed in the Ross county jail.

Mrs. Buck, 37, was the wife of William Buck, a Mason county (W. Va.) farmer, and was postmistress of Grimms Landing, W. Va., at the time of her death.

RODGERS RESCUE RECALLED.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Officials believed today there is little chance of finding alive the five Dole flight aviators lost in the Pacific in the Miss Doran and Golden Eagle.

A desperate hope still prevailed, however. The Navy's 42-ship search, augmented by airplanes and passenger ships, will continue at least until Tuesday.

At 4 p. m., Pittsburgh daylight saving time, today, it was pointed out, it will have been 96 hours since the planes left Oakland airport for Hawaii.

The planes assuredly came down. Navy officials feared that the canvas wings of the land-planes might be watersoaked, and their rubber safety boats be overturned or broken by heavy swells of the mid-Pacific.

Such optimists as there were here pointed to the almost miraculous rescue of Commander John Rodgers in 1925 after his plane floated nine days on the Pacific.

TYPHOON SWEEPS HONG KONG DISTRICT

HONG KONG, China, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—A typhoon hit Hong Kong this morning. Trams and ferries to Kowloon, opposite Hong Kong, stopped running and shipping was held up. Naval men were sent to man a China Navigation Company steamer without officers, owing to a strike in Kowloon bay.

Fearful the stables of various military camps at Kowloon might collapse, the authorities loosed nearly 100 horses and mules, many of which stampeded along the Nathan and Chatham roads.

'POP BOTTLE' HOLDUP FAILS; NAB SUSPECT

Albert Taylor, 34, Negro, of 79 Boone way, is alleged to have tried to hold up E. T. Gardner, 33, "city," at Boone way and Clark street early today.

The Negro struck Gardner over the head with the bottle when Gardner did not put up his hands, but Gardner countered with a right to the jaw, and the hold-up was a draw. Both were arrested.

QUEST FINDS CINDERELLA

CHOSEN

From kitchen to ballroom is the hope of many modern Cinderellas. Pretty Evelyn Nacey, 18, Braddock, had her hope fulfilled when she was chosen "Miss Capitol, Braddock." She is a waitress in an Oakland restaurant. The "Miss Pittsburgh" title quest found her in the gaiety and splendor of a reception and ball in honor of the winning contestants.

JAIL WARDEN RETURNS

"FINDS BIRDS FLOWN"

Warden John MacNeil came back to his office at the county jail yesterday from a short vacation and learned things had not gone well in his absence. He was just in time for the probe into conditions that permitted escape of Paul Jaworski, "Flathead" leader, and John Vashinder, both convicted murderers, Thursday.

Miss Pittsburgh Greets New Fashion Queen

How wonderful it was this morning to greet Pittsburgh's first national beauty titleholder, Miss Alfhild Larson, who returned from the St. Louis fashion model pageant as "America's Queen of Fashion." I don't believe there could have been a thrill in my heart one bit bigger than what I felt as I saw our beautiful representative step from the train. Even if it had been my own good fortune to have come back a winner, I just know I could not have been happier.

It was the first time I ever met Miss Larson. Many times her pictures in The Sun-Telegraph filled me with admiration for her. When she left to compete in St. Louis, I did hope so much that she could come back the winner. And if I thought she was lovely in her pictures, I really don't know how to describe my thoughts upon meeting the titleholder. She is so pretty and charming.

What impressed me so much was how unassuming she is with this new honor. As we chatted, it was congratulations from myself to her, and she was hoping for me that I might be equally fortunate at Atlantic City next month. She didn't seem to want to tell me a thing about herself and the trip. It was all about how she hopes I will win, too. It is certainly wonderful to find that unselfish thought from a girl who has won her crown and really has so much ahead for herself. She brought Pittsburgh one honor and I'll try real hard to fulfill the hopes of my boosters.

Last Kick of Horse Going to Grave Kills Man

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 20—A 65-year-old farmer, Henry Ang, of Linwood, was kicked to death today by a 32-year-old horse which he was leading to the grave he had dug for it. The horse kicked Ang in the stomach.

Dr. Charles C. McNulty, of Atlantic City, had just pronounced the period of the horse's usefulness at an end. This was the first time the animal had been out of his stall for several years."

NEW YORKER CAUGHT IN CONFIDENCE GAME

LONDON, Aug. 20. Amos Phipps of New York caused the arrest and detention at the Bow street police station of two Canadians, Thomas Jefferson Shurman and William Bradley, on a charge of attempting to swindle him out of $45,00. The court proceedings were secret.

Phipps is understood to have met Shurman and Bradley in Switzerland and later in London. He became suspicious and notified the police after being induced to cable to a New York bank for the sum indicated. The business enterprise in which Phipps was invited to join is said to be nonexistent.

SCHWAB TO SPEAK IN HIS NATAL TOWN

ALTOONA, Pa., Aug. 20.—Charles M. Schwab today accepted the invitation to be a speaker at the annual home-coming and community picnic at Williamsburg, Blair county, August 24. Mr Schwab was born in Williamsburg and spent his early life there.

11 EXPEDITIONS FIND NO TRACE OF ASHLEY

SHELL MOUND, Tenn., Aug. 20.—Eleven expeditions into Nick-a-Jack cave had failed today to reveal any trace as to the fate of Lawrence Ashley, cave explorer and geologist, who entered the cavern at 9 o'clock last Monday. Ashley, as far as can be ascertained, carried only scant provisions with him and was equipped with a limited supply of carbide to light the underground passages which he set out to explore.

Near the bank of an underground stream which flows through the recesses of the cavern, one party of searchers found imprints which they believe were made by Ashley's hands and knees, but there was no clue as to whether the explorer had slipped into the icy waters and had been swept away or had merely crawled to the bank of the river in his exploring work.

Meantime, there was no cessation of the search. Farmers in the community have volunteered to penetrate the uncharted passages and the state of Tennessee has also taken an active part in the quest. Gov. Austin Peay yesterday ordered Chief Mine Inspector O. P. Pile to report immediately at the cave with six picked members of the mine rescue crew from Rockwood.

WAR LECTURE STARTS RIOT

By Universal Service.

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 20.—While Maj. Enrique Rottjer of the Argentine Army was lecturing before the law students at the University of Buenos Aires on the subject of "War Between Armed Nations," 600 students interrupted the lecture with hoots and shouts of: "Down with militarism! We do not want war! Go back to the barracks!"

A riot ensued. The fight started with sticks and fists between the students and 80 or 90 army men who were present. There were many slight casualties. The secretary of the university, Dr. Ayarragary, was injured.

AUCTION BLOCK TO GET FAMED BOURBON RELICS

VENICE, Aug. 20.—Many precious historical relics of the House of Bourbon will go under the hammer in the salons of the Excelsior Hotel, Lido, on August 25, when the effects of the picturesque Don Carlos the Pretender are sold. Many of the articles will be personal souvenirs of the pretender to the throne of Spain, whose romantic career threatened to eclipse the present King Alphonso XIII.

Guard Buildings Here With Tear Bombs

Tear gas bombs have been issued to two hundred patrolmen and plainclothesmen, guarding public buildings, churches and office buildings in every section of the city against possible attacks by Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers, Public Safety Director James M. Clark ordered that each member of the police bureau be supplied with the bombs.

A guard has been thrown around the Federal Building, City Hall, County Jail, the City-County Building and the Western Penitentiary. Every bridge in the city also is under guard. The guards were ordered to shoot to kill if any challenged trespassers or suspicious persons found loitering near the guarded buildings start trouble.

CRASH VICTIM ASKS $25,000

Legal action for $25,000 damages against the Consolidated Ice Company has been started in Common Pleas Court by James Teets for injuries alleged to have been received August 24, 1925, in Fortieth street in an accident between an ice truck and an automobile in which he was riding.

Alphonso Fisher is suing W. H. Patterson and the Johnstown Office Supply Company for $10,000 damages for injuries received March 12 last in an automobile smashup at Kirkpatrick street and Bigelow boulevard. Because he was injured by a Procter & Gamble Distributing Company truck April 2 last in Anderson street, Louis Marcus has instituted action to recover $10,000 damages. Edward McGrath, as result of an automobile accident November 14 last at Bigelow boulevard and Fifth avenue, is suing Evan Evantoulka for $10,000 damages.

CAPT. DOLLAR, 83, BREAKS RIBS, KEEPS ON WORKING

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Employes in the office of Capt. Robert Dollar, 83, head of the Dollar Steamship Company, have learned that the veteran ship operator had fallen a few days ago at his home in San Rafael, near here, and had broken two ribs. The family doctor set the ribs, and Capt. Dollar continued his daily office work as usual. He said nothing of the accident to his office force until yesterday.

FOUR GASOLINE CARS ENDANGERED BY FIRE

Four cars of gasoline were in the path of flames which swept the auto wrecking plant of B. Zeff, Second street and Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad, Braddock, last midnight. When the flames were at their height a shifting crew hauled the cars away. Damage amounted to $1,000.

No Bootlegger

BUT A WITNESS

Charges against Samuel Spadora, 12, youngest prisoner ever taken in a raid here, were dismissed by the United States Commissioner, but he was ordered held under $500 bond as a material witness in the case of Frank Greco, 35, charged with manufacturing and possessing liquor. The two were arrested when agents raided a bootleg plant in the boy's home, 1318 Juniata street.

VETERANS FIND FRANCE RISING FROM RUINS

PARIS, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—American Legion pilgrims, scattered today along the old battlefront in France, were having difficulty finding landmarks to refresh their own memories or to point out to wives and children. Crops wave over what once were trenches, and places which consisted of piles of scorched bricks now are neat, prosperous towns and villages. Even war's ravages in woods and forests have been almost completely blotted out by luxuriant nature.

The Americans, however, find their former hosts and hostesses unchanged. In cottage and chateau everywhere they are meeting the proverbial hospitality of the French country folk, and if they eat and drink all that is being pressed upon them, the medical section of the American Legion convention will have its hands full before the visitors leave for home.

Invitations to public receptions continue to arrive at headquarters from cities and towns. Thus far, only one has been accepted by Adjutant James F. Barton, in charge of the arrangements for the forthcoming convention. It is one from the city of Rheims to a banquet on September 23.

SMOKES IN BED, HE'S BURNED

While sleeping on the third floor of his home, John Powers, 24, of 512 Main street, East Pittsburgh, was severely burned on the back shortly before 5 o'clock this morning, when bed clothing ignited from a lighted cigaret.

Powers was overcome by smoke when he attempted to make his way to safety. He was found in the hallway unconscious by police and firemen and removed to the Braddock General hospital. Damage was estimated at $50.

DRY "STOOL PIGEONS" DENIED FEDERAL PAY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Casual employment of prohibition "stool pigeons" is banned by Acting Comptroller General Lurtin R. Ginn. Those offering "inside stuff" on dry law violations must be employed in a regular way and paid by authorized disbursing officers, Ginn ruled in deciding there was no authority to pay back $96 to former Administrator R. E. Frith of Los Angeles. Frith paid that sum to an informer out of his own pocket.

Missing Rescue Pilot On World Flight

DALLAS, Tex., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Ranking as one of America's foremost air aces in the World War, Capt. William P. Erwin, pilot of the Dallas Spirit, undertook a round-the-world flight from Dallas August 10 to round out a decade of flying.

He wore the distinguished service cross, won in the war for obtaining valuable information under fire and "strafing" machine gun nests to protect American troops. Eight enemy planes were brought down by the young officer—he is now 31—and he, himself, was shot down in his flying machine several times.

Born at Ryan, Okla., Erwin was educated to be a musician, but when war was declared he abandoned a tour of the country with a composer of religious songs and went to Fort Logan H. Root, Little Rock, to become an aviator. His training was completed overseas and he became a pilot in September, 1917.

In his flight toward Honolulu in the Dallas Spirit, Capt. Erwin took a zig-zag course to look for the missing planes Miss Doran and Golden Eagle. He also was covering the first leg of a proposed flight from Dallas to Hongkong for a $25,000 prize offered for him alone by William E. Easterwood, Jr., Dallas capitalist. Easterwood, who announced the offer to put on a "side show," notified Capt. Erwin yesterday that unless he took off today the prize would be withdrawn.

SAN FRANCISCON, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Alvin H. Eichwaldt, 25, navigator selected to steer the Dallas Spirit over the Pacific from Oakland, Cal., to Honolulu, with Capt. William P. Erwin, went to sea when he was 15 years old and followed the sea up to the time he climbed into the fuselage of the Erwin monoplane.

Eichwaldt's home is in Hayward, Cal., where he has lived with his mother, Mrs. Florence Delaney Eichwaldt.

During the World War Eichwaldt served eight months in the Navy with mine layers in foreign waters. When he left the service he held the rank of quartermaster.

DORAN FAMILY 'STILL HOPING'

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—A message of sympathy from the Doran family of Flint, Mich., has been received by Mrs. Frank Pedlar Joy, of Miami, Fla., mother of Auggy Pedlar, pilot of the biplane Miss Doran, lost in the Pacific with its crew, Miss Mildred Doran and Vilas Knope.

"We are still hoping for good news. Please accept our sympathy in these hours of anxiety," read the message, signed the "Doran Family."

Mrs. Joy, visiting relatives here, was forced to keep to bed, for she is worn out with anxiety over the fate of her son.

Invasion of Skunks Hits Community's Mode of Life

WESTON, W. Va., Aug. 20.—The whole mode of life in this community has changed as the result of an unexplained invasion of skunks. Hunting dogs are losing their ambition, motor cars have been wrecked when their drivers made left-hand turns, persons with a reputation for punctuality are growing tardy in keeping their appointments and the fair sex is showing an aversion for moonlight strolls. Policemen called to banish the animals have turned over their tasks to country lads who are up in skunkcraft.

"Blonde Blindness," New Movie Malady, Claims Anita Loos as Sterling Gets Boy-Friend Role

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 20.—The most important male character in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" is, by popular vote, Gus Eisman, button manufacturer and Lorelei's best friend. Almost as much interest has centered around finding the right actor to create Eisman on the screen, as in the choice of the blonde gold-digger herself. Anita Loos, after looking over the prospects, has decided upon Ford Sterling, erstwhile Mack Sennett comedian and now with Paramount-Famous-Lasky, to portray the Chicago button manufacturer.

Anita, who has been here with her husband, John Emerson, for the last few weeks has been looking at an average of 10 prospective lovelies a day. She says she is suffering from "blonde blindness." Meanwhile the tests go along merrily with every actress whose hair shows any partiality toward blondness, holding the thought that she may be picked.

Ford Sterling is an excellent choice for Mr. Eisman. If he doesn't try to overplay the gentleman from Chicago. Sometimes Mr. Sterling gets completely carried away by a characterization with unfortunate results.

The rumor that Ramon Navarro will enter a monastery is rather disconcerting to Irving Thalberg and those in charge at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. With a two-year contract with Mr. Navarro and a full schedule of pictures ahead Mr. Thalberg is wondering how young Navarro could live in a monastery and still be making pictures. However, Ramon assures M-G-M that like many good stories this one may be classed with Mark Twain's death. He begins work almost immediately on "The Sea King," an original story by one of the M-G-M scenario writers. "The Sea King" is a costume play and on the type of "Scaramouche," in which young Navarro made probably his most notable success. "The Sea King," to be directed by Robert Leonard, will be followed by "The Prince of Graustark," and then if Ramon is a good little boy he is promised a vacation.

The Costello sisters, Dolores and Helene, who lately seem to be in each other's company more than in the previous months, are about to be reunited. Helene was farmed out to John Stahl at M-G-M for "Old Kentucky." She has now been told to return to Warner Brothers' studios as soon as she finishes for a part in "The Silver Slave," which we are told provides an equal chance for Miss Rich and Miss Costello. Howard Bretherton will direct. While Helene is busy on the Irene Rich set Sister Dolores will be making "The College Widow," also a Warner Brothers' picture, on an adjacent set.

Attractions In Gayety Include Music And Drama

Manager J. A. McStea, of the Gayety, announces the opening of the local season of Columbia Circuit attractions for Monday matinee August 29. The first booking of the season will be the original "Bozo" Snyder.

This season the Columbia "Wheel" will follow up the success of last year's experiment and present a variety of styles in stage entertainment. There will be melodramas—"White Cargo," "Rain" and "Kongo"—to give a dramatic touch to the series. There will be cartoon comedies, one company of colored entertainers, one half-and-half offering of white and colored players and a score of musical pieces, revues and comedy featuring the scenic equipment.

The list of the Columbia Circuit attractions further includes "Around the World," "Bare Facts," "Be Happy," "Jimmie Cooper," "Cock-A-Doodle Doo," "Darktown Scandals," "Fooling Around," "The Flying Dutchman," "Gaieties of 1928," "Here We Are," "High Hat Revue," "Let's Go," "Mutt and Jeff," "Nothing But Girls," "A Perfect 36" and "Wine, Women and Song." Among comedians will be Lew Kelly, the Lander Brothers, Billy Gilbert, "Sliding Billy" Watson, Bert Bertrand and Jimmie Cooper.

The box office will open for sale of seats Thursday morning, August 25.

ALVIN PLANS TO OPEN WITH "THE RAMBLERS"

Clark and McCullough will appear in "The Ramblers" at the Alvin as the opening attraction on Labor Day, September 5. This musical comedy is by Guy Bolton, Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby. Sammy Lee and John Harwood arranged the dances and the book. The stars are cast as vagabond fortune tellers who have many humorous experiences, first in colorful Tia Juana and then in Hollywood. Marie Saxon is featured in the cast, which also includes Georgia O'Ramey, Horton Spurr, Norma Gallo, William Browning, Billy Taylor, Ruth Tester, Harry Miller, Nita Jacques, John Klendon, Douglas Keaton, Elaine Lank, Al Watson and Harry Pertaine.

Academy's New Season Opens Today With "Kandy Kids"

The Academy opens today with a matinee and a night performance, the attraction being "Kandy Kids," a Mutual burlesque. Max Coleman and Jessie McDonald play the leading roles. Gladys McCormack and Marion O'Neil are among the principals. The book is said to include several diverting travesty skits. There is a singing and dancing chorus. The burlesque is presented with attractive scenic and costume effects, it is said.

HOLLYWOOD REDHEADS DAVIS STAGE FEATURE

Miss Babe Egan and her "Hollywood Redheads," presenting mirth and rhythm, have been booked as the headline attraction at the Davis on the Keith-Albee vaudeville bill for next week. Their performance is promised as a riotous carnival of syncopation.

The final performances of "My Son" by the George Sharp Production Stock Company, will be given in the Pitt this afternoon and tonight. This drama has given Pittsburgh theatergoers an opportunity of seeing Herbert Clark, the youthful Pittsburgh leading man, in a type of character well suited to him.

"Old Ironsides," beginning second week next Monday matinee in the Nixon, is described as the most stupendous undertaking ever planned by Paramount. It is a great romantic sea epic built about the history of the old frigate Constitution.

Tom Tyson and his Morning Glory orchestra will furnish music for the dance devotees of Kennywood Park this evening. The free circus attraction beginning Monday is the Atenos, mid-air marvels and whirling wizards. They perform on a platform 75 feet from the ground about two-thirds of the way up on two large steel wheels, balanced on an axle.

The screen feature in the Grand next week will be "Metropolis," a photoplay version of the stage play "R. U. R." It dramatizes the outcome of an inventor's creation of mechanical men and women, and it is said to contain some remarkable scenes.

West View Park will be host next week to three outings, the North Side Retail Meat Dealers Wednesday and the Odd Fellows' Temple Association and St. Nicholas' Church Saturday. Two concerts are scheduled for Sunday by the Grand Army Band. Monte Carlo Orchestra will be the music medium for dancing every evening next week.

Beautify Your Floors

The New
Premier Duplex Floor Polisher
$10.00

THE reflective beauty of waxed floors always attracts instant attention. Your floors can have that glowing deep-toned lustre, with but little expense and effort.

This 13-inch Premier Duplex Floor Polisher is twice as wide as the ordinary floor polisher, which enables you to wax and polish your floors much quicker.

All you need to do is simply attach it to your Premier Duplex. Then spread a very thin coat of prepared wax over your floors. Allow it to become perfectly dry. Now turn on the current and run the cleaner very slowly over the surface. The brush, revolving over the same spot for a few seconds, creates a slight heat which gives your floor a beautiful burnished lustre.

And you can get the same remarkable results on practically every kind of floor surface—wood, linoleum, tile, marble or composition. Yes, even if they are finished with varnish, shellac, wax or paint.

See a demonstration in our store. See how quickly and easily it imparts lustrous beauty to dull, lifeless floors.

Merely Margy, An Awfully Sweet Girl -:- Story by Lloyd Mayer -:- By John Held, Jr.

AGAIN, TODAY, THE POLO FIENDS ARE WITH US!
NOISY AND ME HAVE DECIDED TO GIVE UP THIS GAME OF POLO!
GIVE UP POLO! WHY YOU HAVEN'T EVEN SEEN A GAME PLAYED!
OH YES! WE JUST SAW 'EM PLAY POLO THAT'S WHY WE ARE GOING TO GIVE IT UP!
John Held Jr.
8-20

"REally, my dear, these odd youths ARab and NOIsy SIMply VANquish me, no less, because after making all these treMENdous preparAtions for playing POlo they have suddenly decIDed NOT to—can you BEAR it? I mean it SIMply SLAYS me because I mean they talk about GIRLS being FICKle and all, but I think it is MEN who are FICKle because MEN practically never have any pertiNASty about STICKING to anything, do you know what I mean? But ANYways, my dear, it was SIMply KILLing because they suddenly aPPEARED looking awfully sort of luGUBrious and anNOUNCED in sort of ANguished TONES that they had decided they would give UP this POlo idea, and when I acted sort of s'PRISED and everything about it, because they had been so terribly enthusiAStic and all about it, they were practicably ready to ROLL over and BUTter themselves with disMAY because I mean they were honestly emBARrassed to TEARS at this point, do you know what I mean? But ANYways, my dear, I was comPLETELY BAFFled and nonPLUSSED about their giving UP this idea before they had even seen a GAME, because I mean I had the IDEA they had never SEEN one yet, but ARab calmly informed me that they HAD seen a game and THAT was why he and NOIsy had decided to give UP the idea of trying to play POlo—can you BEAR it, my dear?"

QUICKSANDS OF LOVE

A New Phase of "Revelations of a Wife"

By Adele Garrison

DICKY'S queer, secret resentment against me, the reason for which I could not fathom, appeared to increase as the days went on. My natural worry over his attitude was offset, however, by the relief I felt at the steady improvement in his health dating from the time of his first visit to his physician.

I made several tentative efforts to break through the wall which had grown up between us, for, womanlike, my own [illegible] against him had been swept away by the fear which his illness brought me. But when I discovered that every effort only resulted in increasing Dicky's irritation against me, I quietly withdrew into the protective shell of aloofness I had built up around me during the past months and threw myself with renewed zest into my work for Philip Veritzen.

By a queer coincidence, the great dramatic producer's air of reserve and subtle disapproval, shown to me ever since the day when I refused to turn down Hugh Grantland's dinner invitation for my employer's hastily invented "conference," had diminished in inverse ratio to Dicky's steadily increasing irritation against me. With a reprehensible—but natural—little thrill of vanity, I realized that the first break in his carefully nursed resentment had come upon the night when Dicky had taken Lillian and me to the night club to see the widely advertised masked dancer, and Mr. Veritzen had been given the fourth place at our table because it was the only vacant one in the room at the time of his arrival.

It was the first time he ever had seen me in any other garb than the rather severe little gowns I wore at my work in the library and at his office. His eyes had said only too plainly that his critical taste approved both costume and wearer, and the approving look had not lessened when by a curious quirk of circumstance I had been compelled to dance with Jack Levin, and Mr. Veritzen had applauded me with what apparently was genuine [illegible].

My worry first over Mary Harrison and then over Dicky's illness had effectually prevented me from evincing any interest in my employer's changed demeanor. But as the days went on with no [illegible] of any attempt on Mrs. Baker's part to get into communication with Mary, and with Dicky's physical health improving as rapidly as his inexplicable resentment against me was growing, I found myself vaguely cheered by Mr. Veritzen's old attitude of unqualified approval of my work, coupled with delicate little attentions so skillfully given, and I [illegible] so carefully planned that they appeared to be a commonplace of our routine of work together.

In Mr. Veritzen's own [illegible] his office desks always held flowers, gorgeous roses, fresh blossoms always replacing the first hint of fading beauty upon the part of the old ones. At first there had been delivered only enough to fill the vases, but soon the boxes delivered every other day contained a surplus of flowers which Mr. Veritzen, with apparent carelessness, generously gave to me, always remembering some feminine worker in the office at the same time.

If Dicky noticed the fact that our living room always held exquisitely fresh hothouse blossoms, he made no comment upon it. Indeed he spoke very rarely to me, and when he did kept his eyes averted as if he could not bear to look at me. If he had continued to be physically ill as he had been at the time of my father's visit, my conscience would have prompted an unqualified refusal to Mr. Veritzen when at the close of our conference one day he said carelessly:

"It is such a beautiful day, Mrs. Graham, that I am going to have Otto take me for a little spin before I go home. Wouldn't you like to come along?"

MY SON'S SWEETHEARTS

By Ida McGlone Gibson

His nerves were in a state of panic. What if she now would refuse to see him? If she did, he would camp in front of her house until she decided to come out to him.

How beautiful she was with that nimbus of gold about her head! He had never known her yellow hair was curly.

It was no wonder she told him to leave her when he went down to the car that other morning and found her crying. She had come to see him; she had done all she could to tell him that she was ready to take up things where they left off—and he failed her. He had always failed her!

He found himself praying for another chance. "I will never fail her again," he promised.

The first faint dawning was now fighting the sky down on the eastern horizon. Thank God! he was entering the city. He saw an officer plodding along and slowed down. At last, as he drove up to the door of the house, the sun came up, coloring the whole heavens with brilliant red and gold. Was it a good omen?

Frantically he sent peal after peal through the house. It seemed an interminable time before a maid threw open the door.

"Will you tell Miss Jones that Mr. Tracy is here? Please say that he would not have ventured to call her out of bed, but it is very important, almost a case of life and death."

The girl looked at him stupidly. She seemed hardly awake.

"Miss Jones is not home, sir."

Philip Tracy put out a hand to the top of a wooden settle that stood near him. The long hours at the wheel, the loss of sleep and the nervous tension had taken his strength. He felt as though he were falling.

"Can you tell me where she is? If she is not out of town, I will try to see her as soon as possible."

"Miss Jones went over to her father's yesterday and late last night she telephoned that she was staying there all night."

"Thank you. I will try and get her there," said Phil as he walked somewhat unevenly out of the door.

"You've lost her. You've lost her!" The words were pounding upon his brain. He got into the car and started. He had no idea where, until he found himself headed toward Mr. Jones' house. He had no clear idea that he was driving the car. It was still early. There was no one on the streets except here and there a few men and women on foot or in cars hurrying to some morning work.

He drove up the street. The old elm, the tree where he used to meet Natlee in the long ago, loomed up at the other end of the block. He started so suddenly that the car swerved almost into the curb. He quickly righted it and went on slowly.

Yes, it was true! There was a woman standing by the old elm tree, her arms about it—her cheek against its rough bark.

He could hardly believe his eyes. It was Natlee!

CHAPTER LIX.
A NEW GENERATION IS BEGINNING.

FHILLIP TRACY stopped the car beside the old elm tree.

"Natlee," softly Phil spoke her name. She turned her head and looked vacantly at him.

"Natlee," he said, "I have come for you." He got out and opened the door of his car.

"My own car will be here in a minute," she said.

In an instant he was beside her. "Natlee, why do I find you so early in the morning at our tree?"

"It is not 'our' tree, Phillip Tracy." He noted with despair that she called him "Phillip." "It is Rod's tree, hallowed by all the times he tried to comfort me. The last time I really saw him was here the night before he went away forever, and I had nothing better to give him then than to tell him I was glad he was going because I knew he would take care—oh, it is too terrible. Even at the time he had made his last gesture of love for me and for you, both of us unworthy."

"What are you talking about, Natlee?" asked Phil, who had not understood anything she was saying.

"Don't you know? Were you not notified?"

"No, I was away from the house all day yesterday. Come, get in the car and tell me all about it."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland M.D.

U.S. Senator from New York

MUCH CARE NEEDED AFTER OPERATIONS.

A CALIFORNIA girl wants to know how to care for herself after an operation. She refers to the fact that many persons suffer because of neglect at this important time. She herself is in the early twenties, but says she feels sixty, because of a terrible operation.

DR. COPELAND

This letter set me thinking. Do we doctors neglect to advise our patients as we should, or do the patients neglect to do as they are told? Perhaps it is a little of both.

Of course, it is possible to give a complete answer to this inquiry only by having particulars as to the nature and extent of the given operation. But there are certain general rules which apply to the after-care of all surgical undertakings in which general anesthesia is used.

When chloroform, ether or any other profoundly acting anesthesia is to be given, the stomach and intestines should be empty. Food in the stomach crowds the heart and does not give it full play. The intestines should be unloaded beforehand, so there will be no occasion for the patient to be disturbed by a bowel movement.

After the operation there should be rest and quiet. At first, until the shock of the surgery has passed away, the patient should be kept warm. Hot water bags or bottles and blankets will be needed. Great care must be taken not to burn the unconscious patient.

Later, fewer covers and more air will be appreciated. Good sense must be used in this matter. The comfort of the patient is a pretty safe rule to follow.

Just how soon it will be all right to sit up depends on the operation. But in no case should freedom of this sort be used unless the attending surgeon has advised it. In this matter, and all others, his word should be law.

In an abdominal operation, especially where the intestines or pelvic organs are involved, it pays to allow time for healing to take place. Otherwise there will be more scar tissue and more adhesions.

The abdominal cavity is lined with a delicate membrane called the peritoneum. When this is cut or torn, unless it is most carefully stitched, there will be adhesions, two or three neighboring parts growing together in the healing process. The most skillful surgeon may not be able to prevent this.

The active life should be resumed slowly. The healing measures are delayed. There are tenderness and weakness of the parts for a long time. You must be patient with yourself and your doctor. Miracles are not to be expected, beyond the miracles of modern surgery, and they are many.

MILADY BEAUTIFUL

By LOIS LEEDS

BEAUTY QUESTIONS ANSWERED
Lubricating the Dry Complexion.

DEAR MISS LEEDS: (1) My complexion is very good but it is rather dry. When I powder it appears scaly. I have been using theatrical cream for cleansing and I do not wash my face with water. I also use cold cream as a powder base. Will this cause enlarged pores? (2) How can I bleach hair on my forearms and lip?

MARIE D.

Answer—(1) The facial treatments you are using are good for your type of skin. After cleansing your skin with the cream, wipe it off carefully and pat on a little witch-hazel to close the pores so that they will not become enlarged in time. It is likely that the dryness of your skin may be partly due to internal conditions. Be sure to include enough dairy products such as milk and butter in your diet. If you are underweight, build yourself up to normal. Since I think you must go deeper in order to overcome the excessive dryness of your skin which, if left alone, will lead to premature wrinkles. (2) Bleach the hairs with a lotion made of three parts peroxide and one part ammonia.

SKIN TROUBLES OF TEENS.

Dear Miss Leeds: (1) I am 18 years old, 5 feet 5 inches tall and weigh 115 pounds. I am troubled with boils, pimples and blackheads. I also get sties in my eyes. How can I clear my skin? (2) I would like to gain weight. My complexion is very sallow. (3) Could you give me some information about the care of the eyes?

BERT.

Answer—(1) You need to gain about 10 pounds. The blackheads may be prevented from appearing by keeping the skin scrupulously clean. Wash your face with soap and warm water every night, using a complexion brush to work in the lather. Rinse in clean warm water and press out any "ripe" blackheads. Rinse in cold water, dry with a clean towel and pat on some boric acid solution or witch hazel, allowing it to dry on your skin. You may then apply the following salve and leave it on over night: ½ dram ichthyol, 1 dram zinc oxide, 1 dram starch, 1½ drams petrolatum. When you have rid your face of blackheads, the pimples will probably go too. For other treatments for this skin condition, see my leaflet on "Complexion Ills" that I shall be glad to mail you on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Young people often have these complexion troubles, but if proper care is given to the skin these blemishes will disappear in time. You should consult a physician about the boils. They usually result from wrong diet. A local treatment for the sties consists of bathing the eyes in warm boric acid solution and then applying a little yellow oxide of mercury (1 per cent) to the sore spot. The presence of both sties and boils indicates that your physical condition is poor. You should have a thorough overhauling by a physician. (2) and (3) Please send for my leaflets on "How to Gain Weight" and "Beautiful Features." The latter gives directions for care of the eyes in general, but if you are having any trouble with yours you should consult an eye specialist about them. From your description of yourself I judge that you do not eat wisely nor get enough active outdoor exercise every day.

Butcher Turns Tailor, Then Turns Pale

Lightning doesn't strike twice in the same place and enough is enough and you can't fool all the people all the time, and all that sort of thing.

Ask Frank Casillo, the butcher at 1622 Forbes street. Frank knows his steaks and chops and he can sight contented veal just like (Jack Robinson) that. But Frank doesn't know his bolts from the blue. He's no tailor. He admits it.

Two sailors (Frank knew they were sailors because they wore the uniforms and talked about that late Geneva conference) dropped in with nine bolts of blue cloth. Smuggled stuff, they said, but not even damp. Forty-five white chips per bolt, a total of $405, they asked.

That's a lot of money no matter what country you're in. Frank was dubious. A friend, a big merchant man, dropped in to see Frank.

A bargain, it was, said Frank's friend. Buy it, he said, and I'll buy it from you later.

Frank bought it for $405. A day later he was disillusioned. The whole lot was worth maybe $15, maybe $20.

That was Monday. Yesterday two more boys in navy blue trotted into Frank's shop. Any bolts today, Mister? Frank looked at a long sharp cleaver and looked at the boys.

"Go," said Frank, "to ——," but the boys had gone.

Safety First

The first rule, if keeping "That Schoolgirl Complexion" is your aim

By NORMA SHEARER

THE simple rules of nature are the ones to employ, if keeping a charming skin is your ambition.

Do not gamble with your complexion on untried ways when Youth's rule is so simple, so economical.

Today beauty authorities urge a simple beauty treatment—soap and water for the face. But not just any soap, a true complexion soap—Palmolive. And regularly each night at bedtime as described.

Millions have kept schoolgirl complexions in this way. Their complexions are the despair of foreign beauties. This rule is their habit.

Wash the face gently with Palmolive. Massage its balmy olive and palm oil lather into the skin. Rinse with warm water; then with cold. If your skin is inclined to be naturally dry, apply a little good cold cream. That is all—it's nature's rule for keeping that schoolgirl complexion.

Use this way regularly, and particularly before bed. Note how much better your skin in one week. Use powder and make-up all you wish. But never leave them on over night.

GET REAL PALMOLIVE

Costs but 10c a cake. Use no other on your face. But be sure you get GENUINE Palmolive. Crude imitations, represented to be of olive and palm oils, are not the same as Palmolive. Remember that and TAKE CARE. The Palmolive-Peet Co., Chicago, U. S. A.

Lone Star Gas Firm In Dull Market

Lone Star Gas led the list again today on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange, but the volume of dealings was considerably smaller than yesterday. At the start of the market the demand for Lone Star was strong enough to bring an opening quotation of 48½, equal to the record high for the issue and a fractional advance over yesterday's last sale. Most of the early trading was in small lots representing investment purchasing invited by the recent rise in the stock and the current reports that a capital rearrangement may be announced shortly. In event a change in the stock set-up is made, it is thought in some quarters that an equivalent to a 50 per cent stock dividend on the present shares may be declared. The other oil and gas stocks were very dull. Bids were nominal and close to previous prices, but there was little inclination to sell.

Reports of an absorption of Cleveland ice companies by the American Ice Company, giant of the industry, were expected to create a little interest in the shares of the local ice concerns, but only one odd lot of Consolidated Ice preferred came out with the price showing no change from the last previous sale.

Durant, who sailed last night on the Homeric for a short vacation in Europe, issued a statement in which he said: "In my opinion good securities will sell higher than ever before in the history of this country. Money is so plentiful that it is almost a drug on the market with a prospect that in the very near future the present rate for time money will be considerably reduced. While many students and specialists will differ with me, I believe we are drifting into a so-called bull market unprecedented over a period of many years to come."

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—The cotton market opened firm today at an advance of 27 to 38 points, all active months except May and July making new high record prices for the season.

December sold up to 20.80 cents and March to 20.90 cents on buying which was active and general and appeared to be stimulated by continued unfavorable crop reports combined with expectations of a bullish government report today on boll weevil and other insect activities.

The higher prices met a good deal of realizing for over the week-end, which caused reactions of 10 or 12 points from the best during the first hour, but the setback seemed to bring in enough additional buying to give the market a steady undertone.

Private cables said that an early advance in Liverpool on covering and buying on reports of crop deterioration had been checked by realizing and hedge selling.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Week-end profit-taking was in evidence in various sections of the bond market today. However, continued easy money and the want of competition from new offerings, of which there was an aggregate of less than $50,000,000 this week, lent prices a firm undertone, and several of the high-grade investment mortgages were again climbing gradually.

Realizing was most pronounced in the French and Italian groups. French Government 8s, Lyons 6s and Italian 7s were all fractionally lower. Domestic convertible liens also inclined to heaviness, including the "D" 4s of the Erie and Brooklyn Union Gas 5½s.

There were few advances of more than a small fraction. Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh 4½s moved up a half, and smaller gains were recorded by Baltimore and Ohio (Southwestern) 5s, Pennsylvania 6s and Bethlehem Steel 5½s.

United States government obligations received scant attention, but prices were steady.

STOCK MARKET FIRM, GAINS NUMEROUS

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—The brisk demand for the motor shares featured the firm opening of today's stock market. Initial gains, as a rule, were small but they were well distributed. Goodrich Rubber opened a point higher at 69, a new peak, and New Haven Railroad showed an initial gain of 1 point on the prediction of a director that dividends would be resumed next year.

Publication of a bullish interview with William C. Durant on the financial tickers stimulated buying of the General Motors issues, the old stock quickly rising nearly 4 points to above 230 and the new climbing above 116. DuPont, which has large General Motors holdings, also moved up about 4 points. Houston Oil quickly converted a small loss into a gain of nearly 5 points. With the average of 20 leading industrials in new high ground, operators for the rise showed increased confidence and extended their activities into new groups. Rails were neglected in the early trading. Western Maryland second preferred, a recent strong spot, selling down 2 points. Foreign exchanges opened steady with demand sterling around $4.85⅝, and French francs just below 3.92 cents.

HOW SALLY JEROME -:- SPENT FIRST WEEK -:- IN PITTSBURGH

MONDAY!
Sally, arriving here in Beatrice Burton's new serial "Sally Shoulders," was found spreading flowers. Sally loves flowers.

ON TUESDAY!
Sally's job, besides being a stenographer in the afternoons, is to keep house. Of course she buys for the Jerome family—with her own money!

AND WEDNESDAY!
Selfish sister Millie ripped open Sally's only mid-season dress. Sally's own hope chest—with only a couple of old shawls in it!

THURSDAY CAME!
After Beau's party, the house was a mess. You'd think a pretty 20-year-old would work in tears, but not Sally. She smiled through life.

FRIDAY, TOO!
Sally smiled and cleaned up. So today, Saturday, Sally's in this paper, while Miss Stephanie Diamond, who posed (above), is playing at the Pitt theater in "My Son."

Jeromes' Squabble Presents A Typical American Home; As Usual, Sally Loses

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

SALLY JEROME, 20, and clever and pretty, is the prop and mainstay of her family which consists of MRS. JEROME; the twins, BEAU and MILLIE, and Sally herself. Mrs. Jerome is a semi-invalid, so Sally does the housework mornings and works for MR. PEEVEY downtown afternoons. In the flat below the Jerome flat lives young TED SLOAN. Mrs. Jerome is dreadfully afraid that Sally will marry him and leave her, but Sally has nothing but friendship for Ted. The only man she's interested in is JOHN NYE, whose office is across the hall from Mr. Peevey's in the Nye-Taylor building. On a Monday in August Millie drops into Sally's office with the news that she's had to quit her job because her employer tried to make love to her. This is always Millie's excuse when she gives up a position, but Beau's girl, MABEL WILMOT, says the real reason is that Millie won't stay in an office unless there's somebody there with whom she's in love. Millie catches a glimpse of John Nye and "falls for him" on the spot. He needs a stenographer, but goes out of town. Millie decides to rest until he returns and then apply for the job. That night Mabel Wilmot gives a party at the Jerome flat. Sally provides the refreshments, thinking that Mabel will pay. They refuse to cheerfully, and Beau even tries to borrow $5 from Sally, who is "flat broke." In addition, they have used up most of the food in the flat and Sally decides that the only thing she can do is to go to her AUNT EMILY, her father's sister, for some money.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

HER AUNT sniffed, "Yes, and I've been doing it for exactly 22 years, and I'm sick of it. I want something new—something that I'm not sure I can do. Something that isn't an old story!" She seemed to bite down on the words, and through the blue-gray dusk Sally could see her eyes snap with enthusiasm and energy.

"Yes sir-ee-ee!" she added, with a nod of her head. "Something that's going to keep me hopping!"

She turned to the girl, suddenly. "Want to take a chance with me?" she asked. "I have a notion I'm going to make money—not right at the start, of course, but later on."

Without a second's hesitation, Sally shook her head. "I'd love to, but I can't," she said a bit wistfully. "You see, I'm sure of my job with Mr. Peevey—I'm sure of the $21 a week he gives me. And if you and I didn't make money at this wayside inn business, I don't know where I'd go to get a part-time job that would pay anything like $21 a week—"

Her voice trailed off into silence.

It would be far more pleasant to be out here with Aunt Emily than sitting in Mr. Peevey's office week after week, knowing that just across the hall Millie was doing her best to make John Nye fall in love with her . . . and that was exactly what Millie would be doing!

"I wish I could come with you, Aunt Emily," she said again, and got up from the steps. "Well, I've got to run along. . . . It's almost time for Mother's hot milk and her sleeping powder."

"Hot milk! . . . Sleeping powder!" snorted her young-old aunt, "Stuff and nonsense! That's what it is! If she'd stir herself around and do a little work now and then she'd not need any sleeping powders. She'd be glad to fall into bed at night and—"

"I've got to go!" Sally broke in sharply, and went. She wouldn't let anyone—not even Aunt Emily—say a word against her mother. Poor Mother! . . . Why, anyone could look at her and see that she wasn't well, with all that unhealthy fat and the puffs under her eyes.

For a wonder, Beau and Millie were at home when Sally got there. They were scarcely ever at home for a whole evening.

Mrs. Jerome sat with them at the dining-room table. They had had their supper, and had a half can of sardines and some potato salad for Sally.

The potato salad was still in the pasteboard container in which Beau had brought it from the delicatessen. When Sally was not at home to get a meal the family always went to the delicatessen for what it wanted to eat.

Beau had been smoking numberless cigarets. The ends of them lay before him on a saucer, and he was reading an ad in the evening paper when Sally came into the room.

He looked up, grinned at her, and went on reading:

"—Nothing [illegible] girl so popular [illegible] to play a musical [illegible] to play a banjo [illegible]lin or guitar, and be the life of the party wherever you go. You can buy one on the installment plan from—"

Sally interrupted him. "Beau!" she said to him, and there was despair in her voice. "PLEASE don't buy anything else on the installment plan! Look at the stuff we're trying to pay for now—the phonograph, and the radio. And it isn't any good now that we've got it!"

Beau looked from his mother to Millie. "You'd think she was paying for them to hear her race, wouldn't you?" he asked. Beau always pretended that he was paying for everything in the flat. In his own mind, he was the head of an expensive and extravagant family.

Mrs. Jerome did not answer him. Neither did Millie . . . They both knew who was paying for the radio and the phonograph.

It was not Beau, for all his brave talk.

It was Sally, of course.

CHAPTER IX.

BEAU glanced up from his newspaper sullenly.

"I don't know why it's any of your business whether I buy myself a guitar or not," he said. "You don't have to pay for it, do you?"

Sally did not answer him at once. She dropped down into a chair beside the untidy table and began to brush the crumbs up into a little heap.

"Well, Beau," she began, after a minute, "I don't suppose it IS any of my business if you want to buy a guitar, only—"

She stopped for a second and emptied the contents of her little leather coin purse upon the tablecloth.

"Here's all the money we have to last all week, and this is only Wednesday."

There were four dollar bills and some loose silver. Sally scooped it up into her palm and dropped it back into the little purse.

Her troubled blue eyes went from Beau to Millie, who was languidly smoking a cigaret and

WATSON HINTS DAWES FOR PRESIDENT

By FRASER EDWARDS.
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Without definitely committing himself, Senator James E. Watson of Indiana drew a picture of the next Republican Presidential nominee which very closely fits Vice President Charles G. Dawes.

The Hoosier statesman insisted that the G. O. P. standard bearer will be a Middle Western man and acceptable to business and the farmer. He added a few details, and when he had finished the portrait more nearly resembled Dawes than any of the candidates in the field.

So far as his own candidacy is concerned, Watson modestly declined to make any comment, but many of his friends insist that he will go to the convention with the Indiana delegation behind him. It also is asserted in some quarters that Watson will deliver the delegation to Dawes at the proper time.

In accepting President Coolidge's announcement as a definite withdrawal from the race, Watson also took Charles E. Hughes at his word. Inferentially, the Senator left Herbert Hoover out of his political calculations.

Lauding Secretary Mellon as "the greatest financial genius in the world," Watson said he would be elected President if it were left to the business interests of the country. Under Mellon's administration in the Treasury, he added, "the finances of our country are better managed than those of any other nation in the world."

PENN ANNEXERS RAP OFFICIALS

Penn township residents held a lively meeting in the Lincoln Park School last night when arguments for annexation of the township to Pittsburgh were heard. Attorney Franklin A. Ammon took part in the heated discussion and Mrs. Cora Weale offered to read a list of township office holders behind in their taxes.

Councilman John S. Herron told the residents that the city would welcome them and quoted figures to show that four boroughs and townships recently annexed to the city paid only as much taxes as six downtown business houses.

Another meeting will be held Monday night and the question will go to the voters at the polls on Tuesday.

Girl 'Red's' Sacco Plea Again Leads to Jail

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—Still crusading for "the new freedom," 18-year-old Aurora D'Angelo today found herself back in jail for soap-box oratory in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The fiery high school girl, who only a week ago went to a cell for leading a riotous protest parade against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, was arrested last night a moment after she ascended a soap box before a crowd of sympathizers and launched a tirade against society.

Shouting defiance, the girl flung at the officers: "You coppers are big bums!" When a hand clasped her arm she cried: "You never work, but I do."

"What is your occupation?" the policeman asked.

"I have no occupation," she hurled back.

And then, with 18 other persons, eight of them women, she again went to jail, as police nipped in the bud a growing radical demonstration.

The disturbances began when a hall which had been rented for a meeting was closed to the sympathizers, fomenting numerous small meetings in the neighborhood.

DUBLIN, Aug. 20.—Alderman John Jinks, whose abstaining from voting nullified the non-confidence motion against the Irish Free State government the other day, resigned his seat in the Dail Eireann last night.

Will Would Be Certain Air Racers Had Gas And Propellers

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Aug. 20.—After my Ford non-stop promotion, I may never be able to promote or back anything else.

But if I was backing an entry for an ocean aeroplane flight I would certainly think enough of the lives of the people taking the chance for me to put a radio-sending apparatus on there for them the first thing. Then if I had any more money left I would get some gas and a propeller for it. Then I would have a law passed to choke the guy that promotes a race out of these hazardous trips. You know, everybody that we got flying are not Lindberghs.

Yours,
WILL.

HEYWOOD BROUN TO WRITE FOR "NATION"

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Heywood Broun, former columnist for the New York World, has announced he will henceforth write a weekly column for the Nation, a magazine of which Oswald Garrison Villard is editor.

No statement was obtained at the offices of the Nation regarding Broun's work for the publication, although Mrs. Mark Van Doren, acting editor, said a statement would be made Monday.

Broun also said he intended to conduct a new weekly paper which he will call "Heywood Broun Says."

VICE FOE TO ADDRESS TWO CHURCH MEETINGS

Two addresses will be made tomorrow by William L. King, director of the Citizens' League of Pittsburgh and Allegheny County, at 11 a. m. Mr. King will address the members of the Lemington Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, speaking on the general work of the league. In the afternoon he will address a union meeting of the First Brethren Church and the Pacific Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church in the Brethren Church, Dearborn street.

DANE ADMITS PLOT TO SELL DRAWINGS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—A plot involving the theft of cruiser plans from the naval base at Newport News, Va., and their sale to a foreign power if the Navy Department refused to pay for their return, has been brought to a sudden end here.

Today, Sven Dan Berg, 24, a Danish draftsman formerly employed at the Newport News base, was held under $50,000 bail, having confessed the theft, and the drawings were safe in the custody of officials of the Department of Justice.

The Dane made his confession late yesterday, after he had been called to the Federal Building on the pretext of scrutiny of his naturalization papers. There he was confronted by government investigators and Hans Christian Bethamer, also a former draftsman at Newport News.

After questioning Berg broke down, confessed that he had stolen the plans for the tonnage and outside construction of cruisers Nos. 26 and 31 and that he had written a letter to the Bureau of Naval Construction at Washington demanding that the government buy the plans and threatening, if it did not, to sell them to a foreign power. He signed the letter "H. R. Dobbs."

MINERS LOCATE LOST WIVES

A double family reunion that almost failed to materialize will take place today when William Wright and Ray Lawson, coal miners, formerly of Moon Run, meet their wives and children.

The men had telegraphed to their wives in Betty Lane, Ky., to come to Pittsburgh. The wives with the children got as far as Washington Thursday night, but were stranded there, with no way of continuing the journey. While the two men searched Pittsburgh the wives were seeking a way to leave Washington, and the double effort proved successful when newspapers carried the stories of each.

dropping the ashes into her empty coffee cup.

"I may have to ask Millie for part of the ten dollars I let her have the other day," she said.

Millie laughed. "T. A. G. I.," she answered airily. "T. A. G. I."

Mrs. Jerome leaned forward. "What does that mean, T. A. G. I.?" she asked [illegible]. She had hard work keeping up with the slang that Millie and Beam brought home from the workaday world.

"It means 'Try and get it'," Sally answered her solemnly. "In other words it means that Millie has spent it all and that for that reason [illegible] get it from her."

"It certainly does. It means just that. [illegible] the waiting world," agreed Millie. "It also means that [illegible] is dead broke. [illegible] Millie had better get busy and wash her hair instead of having it done in a beauty shop tomorrow. [illegible] It sure is tough to be poor, ain't it?"

She got up, pulling her crepe kimono tight around her lovely slenderness and trailed off into her own room. Her voice drifted back to the dining room lazily.

"Sally, make some liquid soap for me, will you, sweet?"

When Millie wanted Sally to do something special for her she always called her "Lovey" and "Sugar" and "Honey Baby."

Sally rose out of [illegible] at the sound of her voice. "All right," she called and then turned to Mrs. Jerome. "Mumsie, don't touch those dishes. I'll be back to wash them away just as soon as I change my dress."

"All right. I guess I'll go and lie down in the porch swing for a bit then," agreed Mrs. Jerome, rising heavily to her feet. "I wish I hadn't eaten a bite of supper. My stomach feels bad."

She often said this after a meal. But she never missed one.

In the bathroom was a glass fruit jar where Sally saved all the odds and ends of soap. It was half full now.

She took it into the kitchen and emptied it into a little kettle with some water. Then she dropped a pinch of borax into it and left it to boil down into liquid shampoo for Millie's hair.

"Don't forget to squeeze some lemon juice into it, too," Millie said to her when she went into the bedroom to get into her bungalow apron. Like most blondes, Millie had an idea that lemon juice would help to keep her hair light. Sometimes she talked about adding some peroxide to the rinse-water, too, but so far she had not done it.

How to keep her hair was one of life's great problems to Millie. So was the kind of lipstick to use, the brand of perfume, the right shade of powder.

She gave long, [illegible] hours to her beauty, rubbing cold cream into her [illegible], blackening her brows and lashes, polishing and painting her finger-nails.

But she never sewed a button on her clothes, never mended a stocking [illegible], never cleaned a pair of her little [illegible]. She [illegible] to Sally to do all [illegible], just as she [illegible] there [illegible] for Mrs. Jerome.

"I'm going out for dinner tomorrow night with Jimmy Davidson," Millie announced, leaning close to her mirror to inspect a tiny red crease on her forehead.

"Dear me, I wonder if that's a bite or a mosquito bite," she murmured, half to herself, scowling at it.

Then she went on: "He's a wonderful guy, Sally. I want you to meet him some time. I've told him all about you—how smart you are and everything. He likes clever girls who have something on their minds besides their hats, so he says. I don't know what he sees in poor little me. [illegible] Do hurry up with the dishes, Sugar, so you can rinse my hair for me, won't you? I never get the soap out, and it's always so sticky when I do it myself. And I do want it to look nice for tomorrow night."

"All right," Sally answered absently. She was standing at the open door of her clothes closet, looking at a black satin dress she had been wearing to the office for almost a year.

"That dress is just about worn out," she added. "There's a hole in each sleeve. I don't know whether I could fix it up or not." She hung it over the foot of her bed and went out to the dining room.

Mrs. Jerome was still sitting there, arms crossed over the pages of the woman's magazine she was looking through.

"I was just wondering if I could cut the sleeves of that old black dress of mine," said Sally, leaning over her shoulder to look at a page of fashion prints. "I hate long sleeves anyway and they say short ones are coming back into style."

"They are. [illegible]," her mother replied. "Here's a picture of a dress with [illegible] no sleeves at all. Just tiny set-in ones. Who's that knocking at the back door?"

[illegible] kitchen. Outside on the back porch stood Ted Sloan [illegible] hands in his pockets [illegible] waiting for her to open the screen door.

"Hello," he [illegible] as he came in and took his usual seat on one corner of the well-scrubbed table. "Where were you tonight?"

She looked up at him with her clear, eager gaze.

"Why, out at Aunt Emily's," she told him, wondering why he looked so grim and serious and why he seemed so moody and down-at-the-mouth.

He said nothing more, but chewed the stem of his pipe thoughtfully while she went in and out of the room, stacking the soiled dishes on the sink.

Wrapped in that same heavy silence he watched her wash and wipe them and put them neatly away on the shelves. His eyes followed the quick play of her hands as she poured Millie's shampoo into a bowl and poured cold water into the pan where it had been made.

"Be back in a jiffy," she told him, disappearing with it.

When she came back he was standing out on the back porch. Through the screen door she could see his stocky figure, outlined against the darkness.

At the sound of her footsteps behind him on the floor of the kitchen he called to her. "C'mere a minute. I want to talk to you."

"Wait a half a second," Sally answered. "I've a couple of things to do."

She did them with that same deft quickness of hers. The bread was rolled in a clean white cloth and laid in the bread-box. The cold sliced meat that was left over from the evening meal went into waxed paper. So did a head of lettuce and bag of a cucumber that Millie had left in the kitchen an hour before, when she helped to get supper.

Then Sally filled a lard pail at the sink and went out on the porch to water her geraniums and to see what Ted Sloan wanted. She thought she knew—

"Move away from my flower box," she told him with elaborate carelessness when she stood beside him at the porch railing. "I want to water my geraniums." There were only three of them in the wooden box that was nailed against the railing. But Sally loved to see their red blooms nodding in the wind when she stood at the kitchen washing dishes. She had a passion for flowers.

"Well, what's on your mind, Theodore Roosevelt?" she asked him when she had finished. Ted's name really was Theodore Roosevelt Sloan.

"You," he said, without turning to look at her. His arms were crossed over his chest and he drew on his pipe thoughtfully.

Suddenly he did turn with a single movement that brought him so close to her that one of his bare arms touched her shoulder.

"You," he said again, and slowly and deliberately took his pipe from his mouth and laid it on the railing in front of him. Then he put his hands on her shoulders and drew her so near to him that she had to lean back to look at him. He seemed very serious and grave, looking back at her through the [illegible] starlight.

"Tired?" he asked quickly.

She shook her head. She was hardly ever tired. She was dead for sleep in the night, but her strong, vibrant young body hardly ever ached with sheer weariness.

"No, I'm not tired," she answered him, moving uneasily under the pressure of his hands. She didn't like to have him hold her in that way—as if she belonged to him. She hated it.

"Let's go in and make some lemonade," she went on, after a tiny pause. She was sure that there wasn't a lemon in the house. She had used the last one in Millie's shampoo. But she had a sudden panicky wish to get away from him. To get back to the lights of the kitchen. To get out of the soft, concealing darkness.

She turned to go, too, but he stopped her with a tighter grasp on her shoulders.

"I said I wanted to talk to you," he told her quietly. "Don't be in such a hurry."

CHAPTER X.

SALLY saw that the only thing was to stay there and listen to what Ted Sloan had to say to her. She had known it for a long time.

For months she had seen that this moment was bound to come sooner or later. This moment when Ted would set their friendship aside and insist upon making love to her. "Making a perfect fool of himself" was the way Sally put it to herself.

Now that the moment was actually upon her, she was nervous and uncertain.

"Well, what do you want?" She asked him sharply. "Tell me what's on your mind, only make it snappy. And you might take your hands off my shoulders, too, if you don't mind. Because I do."

"You do what?" asked Ted, whose brain did not begin to work as fast as hers.

"I mind having your hands on my shoulders," she told him again, and she shook them off with a sudden twist of her whole body.

She leaned back against the railing and looked up at him, waiting for him to begin. After a moment or two he did.

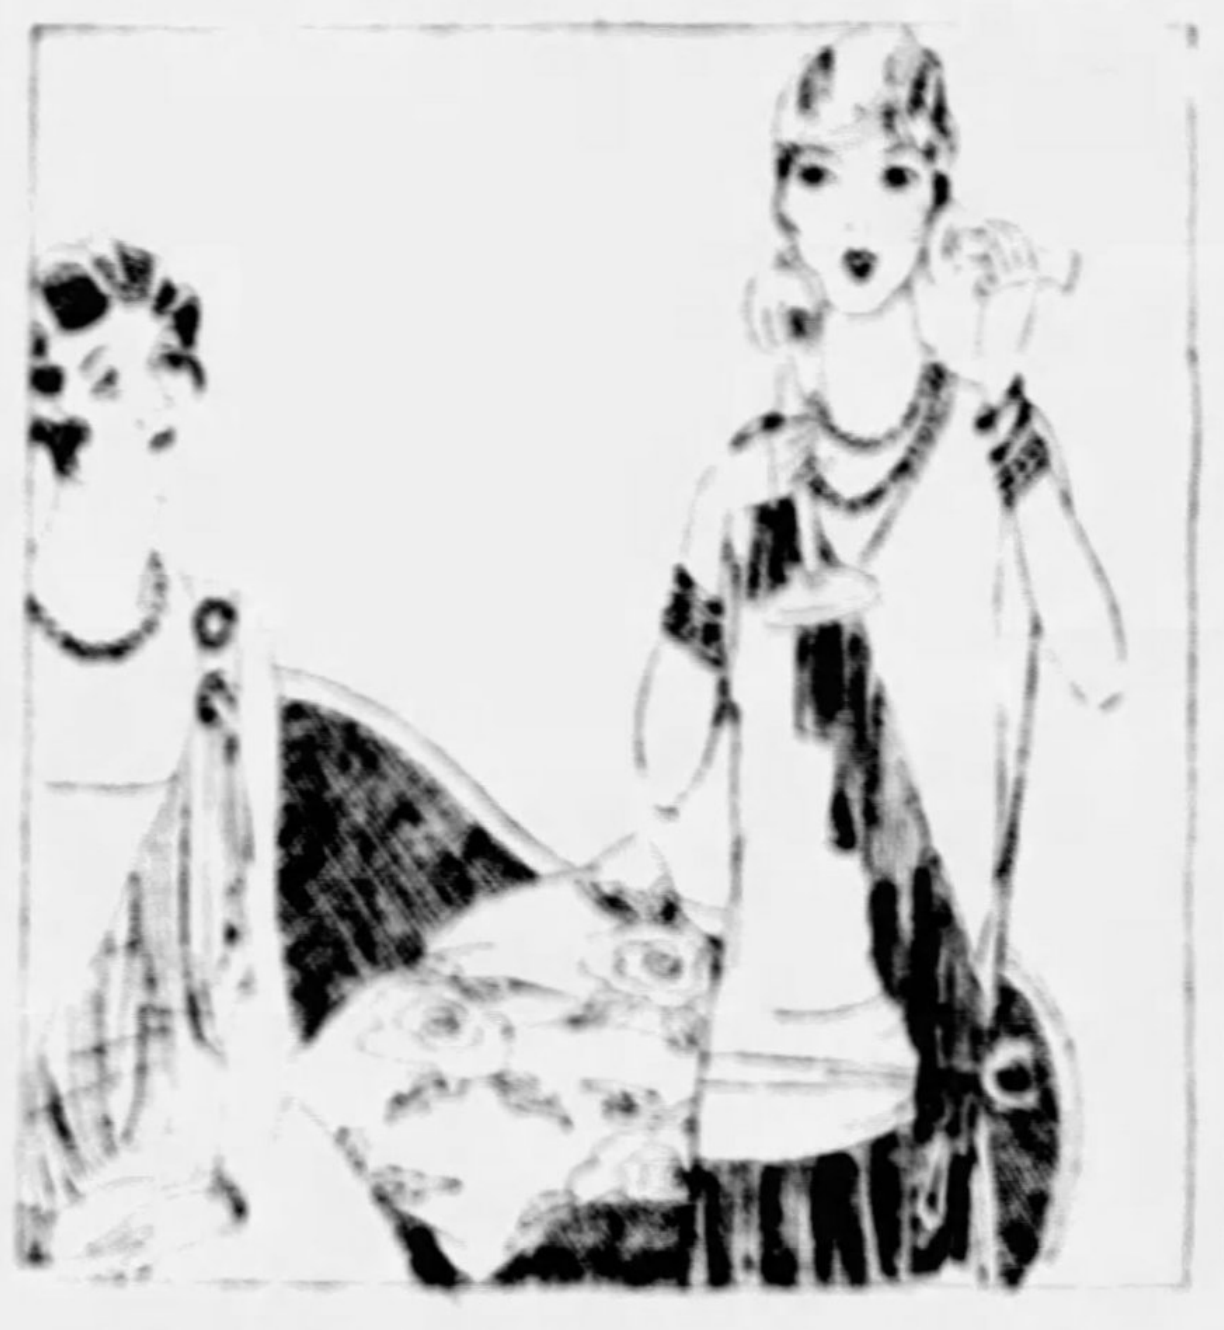
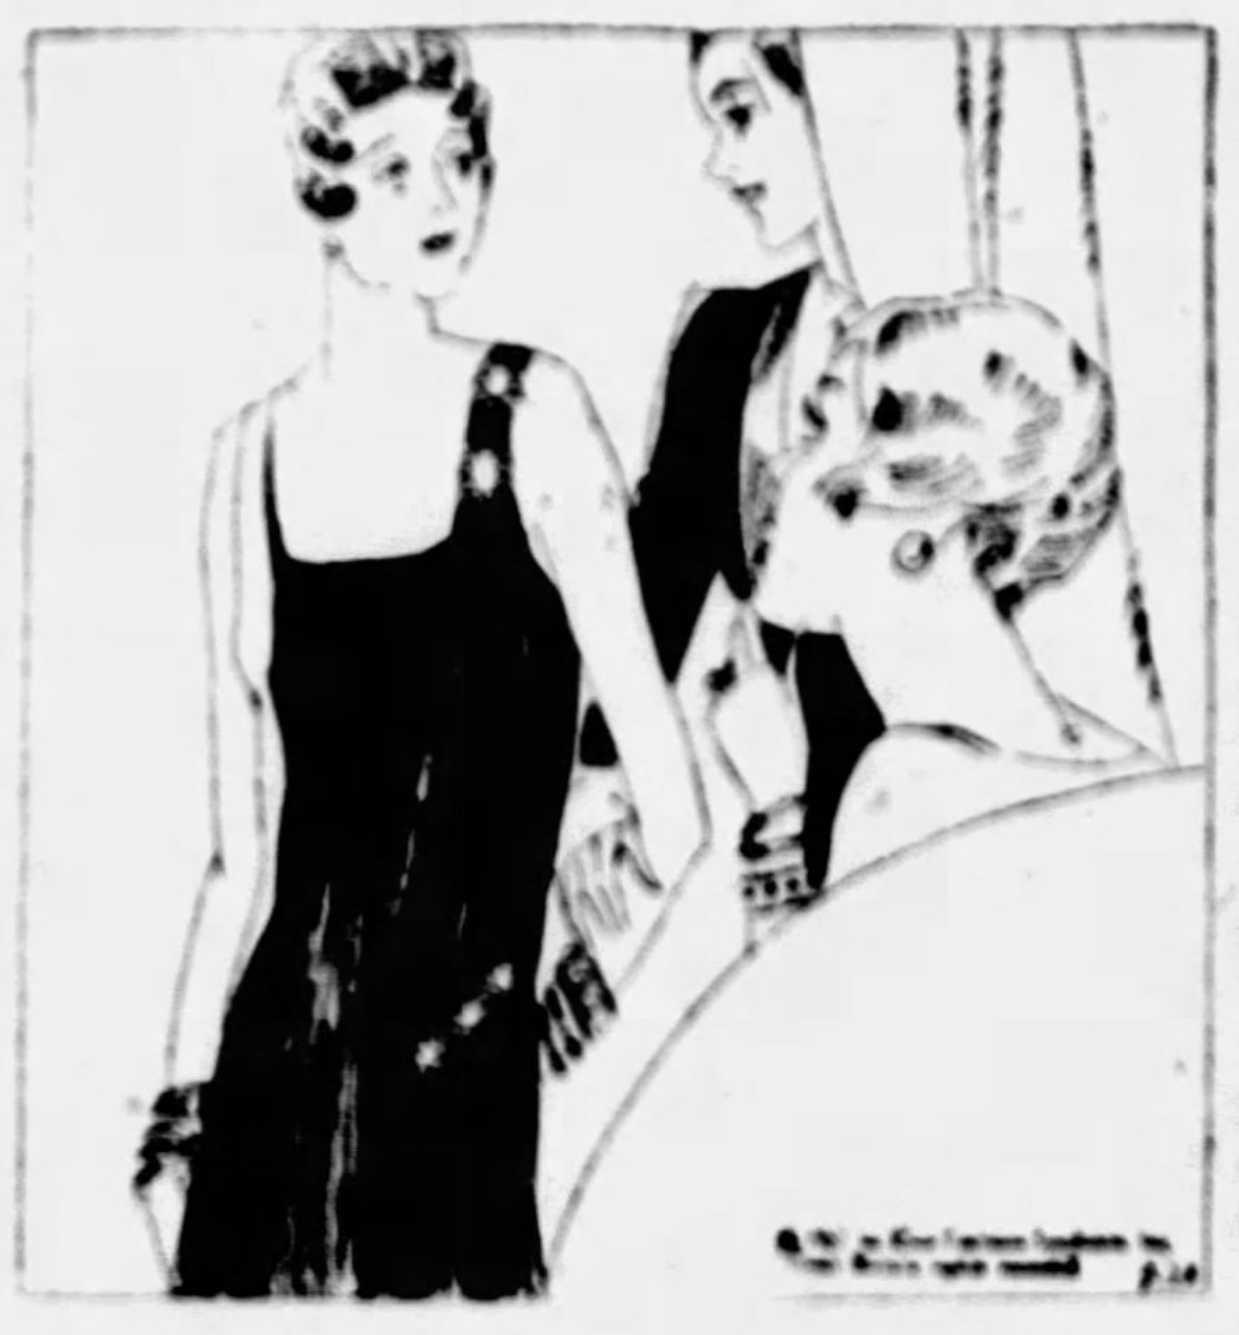
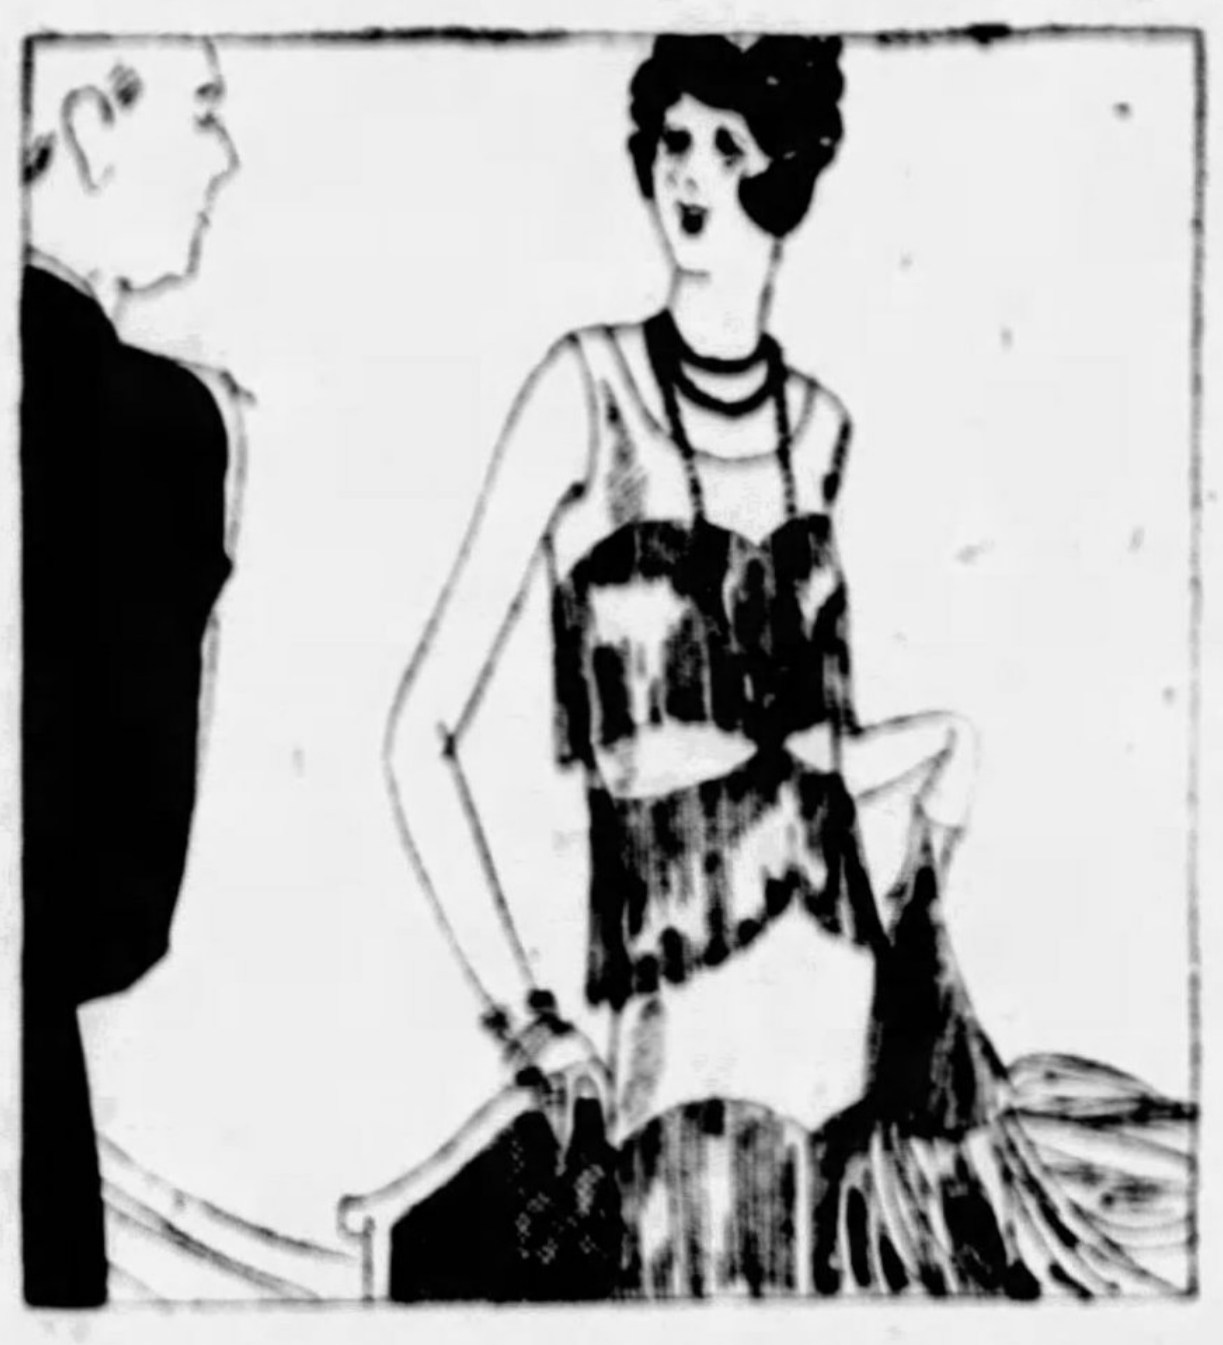
CHIC CHERIE · People Are Hard to Manage · LATEST FASHIONS



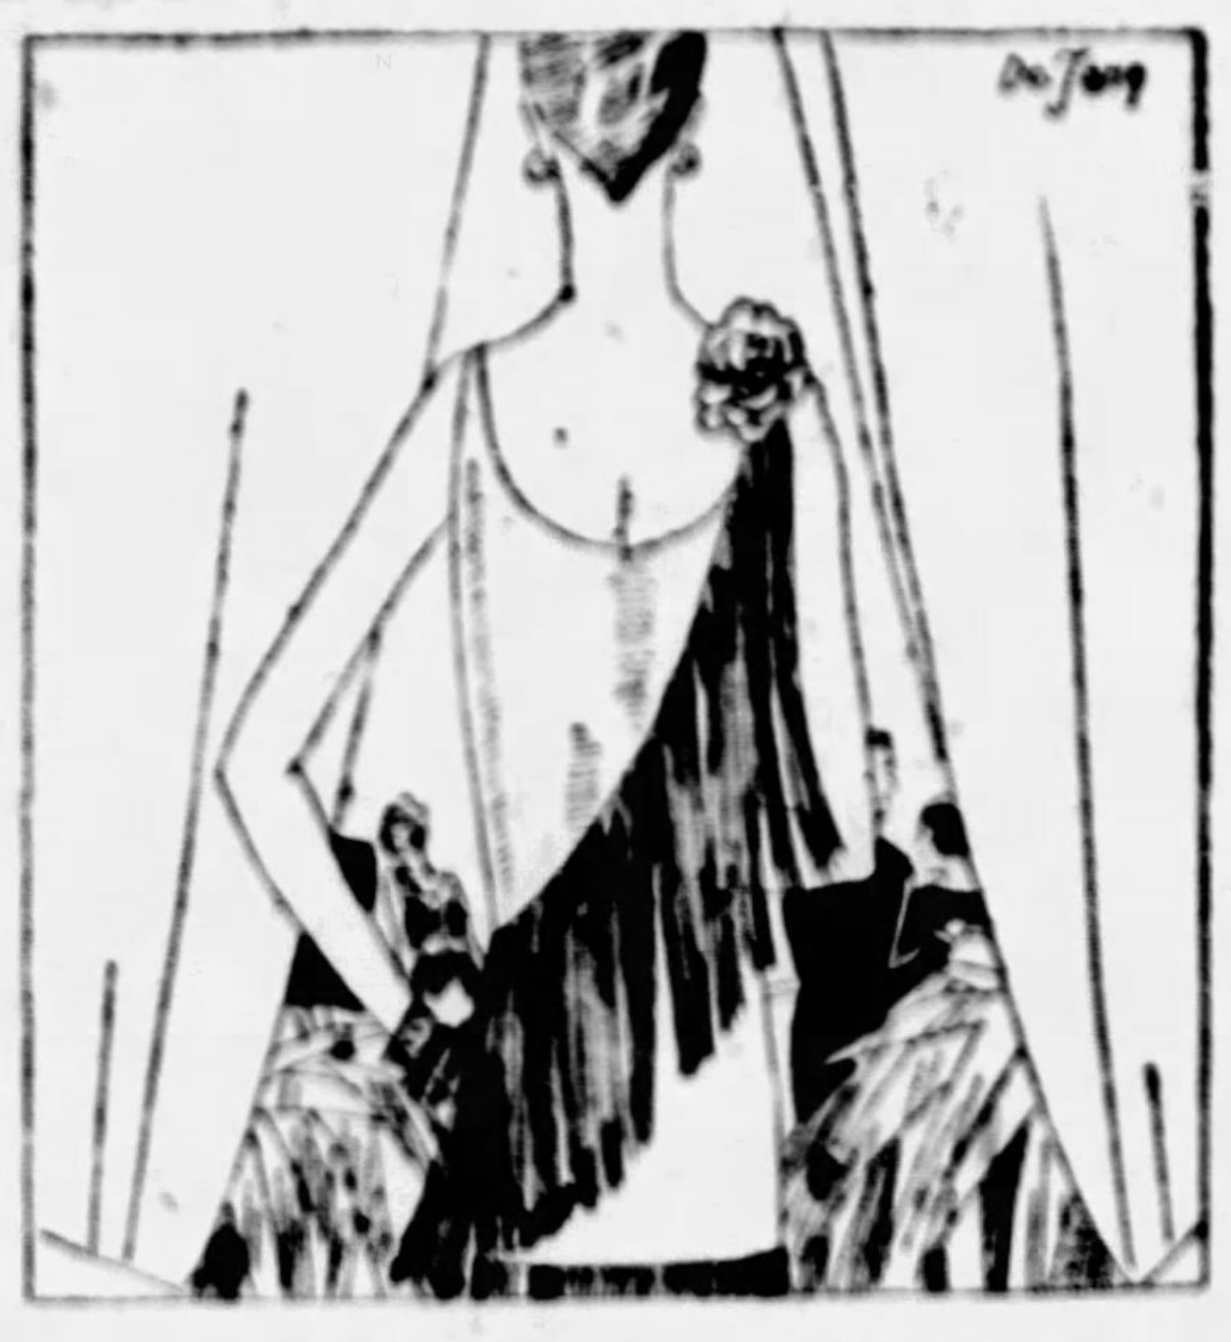
A few guests for dinner would provide a little needed excitement, Cherie thinks, and while she is telephoning, please notice that she is wearing an evening dress of white satin with a fringe that suggests the lines of a Spanish shawl. The skirt has tiers of fringes.



Andy, of course, was delighted to come to dinner. He took charge of Aunt Em immediately, or perhaps she took charge of him. Aunt Em's dress is black chiffon fairly covered with a waterfall of fringe that sweeps down from the point on her shoulder, where it's held by a clasp.



Dina does look charming in a dress of white chiffon trimmed with white fringe in a most unusual sort of fashion. Is that enough of a reason, though, for this elderly gentleman, invited especially to entertain Aunt Em, to devote himself exclusively to Dina alone?



It's odd and not quite reasonable. Andy and Aunt Em and Dina and the elderly gent! Cherie is filled with the annoyance anyone would feel at having people be so unaccountable. The Spanish shawl effect of her dress is even more apparent from the back—and nobody seems to care!

Dorothy Dix Says:

WOMEN SHOULD CULTIVATE TACT AND GRACIOUSNESS.

A POLITICIAN says that Mrs. Coolidge, who, by her tact and gracious manners, makes friends with all with whom she comes into contact, is worth a million dollars a year to the Republican Party.

A tactful, gracious woman is worth her weight in gold wherever you may find her, for hers is the magic that smoothes down the ruffled feathers of the overly sensitive, that sidesteps our prejudices instead of bumping into them, and that generally sandpapers the rough edges of life.

The tactful woman makes the kind of wife whose price is above rubies. In her home the domestic machinery never creaks and groans and shrieks aloud. It moves noiselessly and frictionlessly on oiled ballbearings. There are no hysterical scenes. No quarrels and fights. No perpetual wrangling with children.

The tactful woman, no more than any other woman, gets a saint or an angel for a husband. Hers is just as full of faults as any of the balance of the bunch, but she does not let her perception of them blot out her vision of all his virtues. And having deliberately picked out the man she did for a husband, she doesn't attempt to change him into something entirely opposite.

Being of different sexes, coming of a different heredity, having been brought up in a different environment, there are inevitably many subjects that she and her husband must see from a different viewpoint, and concerning which they have different [illegible] well. She simply sidetracks these. She never drags forth [illegible] absolutely necessary, those topics that are to her husband like waving a red flag before a mad bull, and that are just as good for a fight as a nickel is for a gingercake.

The tactful woman studies her man, and, in the parlance of the day, gets his number, and so knows how to work him. If he has the head-of-the-house complex and likes to be deferred to and consulted, she makes the graceful gesture of asking his advice, which pleases him so much that he never notices whether she takes it or not.

She knows when a man is tired and hungry that it is no time to tell him bad news or ask for money, and so she waits until he is rested and fed and soothed before she imparts the information that mother is coming on a nice long visit, or gives him the bill for her new hats. And she never, never quarrels with him in public, or does anything to make him look small and ridiculous before other people.

The tactful wife keeps her husband always on his toes to live up to her expectation of him, because she praises his good qualities and makes him believe that whatever a dull and unappreciative world may think of him, she thinks him a wonder, and he has to do wonders to justify her faith in him.

Furthermore, the tactful wife helps her husband by making friends for him. Many a business deal goes blooey because an arrogant woman snubs some little insignificant woman whose husband happens to be the kingpin in the deal. And many a man prospers because his wife is so popular that every woman she knows gives her a hand up by patronizing her husband.

They buy their groceries of Mr. A, or they send for Dr. B. when they are sick, or they have their teeth fixed by Dr. C. just because Mesdames A, B and C. are always so perfectly charming and delightful, and say such pleasant things to them when they meet, that they boost their games.

And, on the other hand, an untactful wife is invariably her husband's undoing, because when she irritates people she drives his clients and customers away from him. Nobody is going out of his or her way to patronize the husband of a woman who is snippy, or snobbish, or sarcastic and disagreeable, or who is like a bull in a china shop and always says to you something that hurts like pressing on a sore spot.

The tactful woman is a mother whose children rise up and bless her to the last day of their lives. They never look back upon a childhood in which they were kept in subjection by fear. They never think of their mother as an incarnate "don't," or as a spoil-sport who could be counted on beforehand to veto everything they wanted to do. And it is only after they are grown that they realize how firm was the hand always upon them. They didn't see it at the time because it was so hidden in the velvet glove.

The tactful woman knows that children are abnormally sensitive, and so she does not humiliate hers by correcting them in public. She waits until they are alone together and then talks things over, and the offense is not repeated. She takes the trouble to explain to a child why such and such a thing should be done, or should not be done, and she is obeyed because she does not seem an arbitrary tyrant to the child, and so does not set up irritation in its mind.

She knows that vanity is the strongest human impulse and she plays upon that as upon a harp with a thousand strings. She praises Johnny's good manners until he becomes a Chesterfield. She appeals to Tommy to set her right about some date in history and Tommy has to read up on it to justify his reputation, and so he becomes a student. She calls Mary mother's little helper and Mary goes with enthusiasm at domestic tasks that otherwise she couldn't be driven to. She calls attention to Sally's neatness and Sally has to keep herself spick and span to live up to her blue china.

The tactful wife and mother never has any trouble keeping her husband and children at home. You can't drive them away from the one place in the world where there is peace and comfort, and where their fur is always rubbed the right way.

The tactful woman is the friend we grapple to our souls with hoops of steel because she understands the fine art of being intimate without being inquisitive. She is interested in everything we do, but she does not pry into our private affairs, nor seek to poke her nose into our holy of holies. She listens with sympathy to what we have to tell her, but she asks no questions. She is always willing to help, but she does not feel it gives her the right to boss us. And because she loves us she does not feel that she has the privilege of monopolizing us.

Tact and graciousness. They are the virtues of queens. What a pity that women do not cultivate them more, for they are the magic talisman which opens every door for a woman and will do more to insure her happiness and success than anything else in the world.

Mother's Vacation

AUGUST is the peak of the vacation season in most localities and it is an ideal time for busy mothers to take theirs. Early preserving is done, the family ready for their vacations, if they have not already had them, and mother is, or should be, free to take her vacation. This is not only a pleasure but a necessity; she bears the weight of the family problems on her shoulders throughout the year, labors too frequently so others may be free to go and enjoy themselves, and this should be her time.

All of us who know mothers of the old-fashioned type find that they don't take the initiative where they themselves are concerned and we have to do so for them. However, most of us think older people want rest when they are too often starving for amusement and companionship. If the children go with her they make demands and she gives up to them and does not seek that which she is hungering for. The thing to do is make her do her own choosing as far as possible. If she knows that there is a definite amount to her own credit to pay her way without interfering with the family financial affairs she will set about her vacation with a great deal more pleasure. She has, in most cases, borne the financial burden until it has grown to be more or less of a nightmare. Lift it and she can get out from under it for a time.

Visiting her relatives because she won't have board to pay is not a happy vacation always. Could she board in the town and visit them when she felt inclined it would be a far greater pleasure. It is a question of small financial independence that makes most mothers happy. This accomplished, a vacation may become a real pleasure and benefit to her. The family might one and all club together and make her dream come true for once, remembering all she has sacrificed to do for them collectively and individually.

We don't have to go so far away, or we don't have to have an elaborate wardrobe to have a good time, but we do have to have peace of mind and freedom from anxiety. Simple clothes but suitable, a place that we like and good table board are necessary, also a place where there are comfortable beds, good lights and available bathing facilities.

Blueberry Griddlecakes

Horoscopes

SUNDAY, AUG. 21.

THIS is one of the days when inaction is best, according to astrology, which finds the stars adverse in their influence.

Under this sway there may be an inclination to quarrel with fate and nurse the spirit of discontent. The mind should be disciplined and destructive thoughts should be cast out.

This is a day when attendance at church should be most comforting and inspiring. It is a rule under which preachers should be comforting in their messages to humanity.

While the young are subject to the best possible general direction of the stars this is read as rather an inauspicious day for them.

Love affairs are subject to rather a sinister sway, making for quarrels and misunderstanding.

Many marriages are forecast for the autumn when there will be a trend toward matrimony that is less likely to be transient than present-day divorces indicate those of the past have been.

Persons whose birth date it is may be too much concerned with pleasures for their own good in the coming year. They have the augury of sudden gain.

Children born on this day probably will be bright and unusually charming children.

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Newspaper Synd.)

MONDAY, AUG. 22.

AGAIN sinister stars dominate in this configuration, according to astrology, which finds the aspects threatening.

It is not a lucky day for traveling and summer tourists will be wise to linger longer at seaside or mountain resorts.

Business matters of every sort should be conducted with great care while this rule prevails.

Astrologers stress the fact that American prosperity is to continue, but they advise conservative methods, since unusual events are presaged.

Public expenditures are to be increased because of necessary government projects, the seers point out, and they foretell tremendous progress for the United States.

Romance still remains under a forbidding rule that appears to presage disappointment and disillusionment.

New clothing is to bring new problems in the autumn, it is foretold, for modes are to change to costlier lines.

Children born on this day may be decided in their characters and a bit difficult, but conscientious and able to succeed.

Ritzy Rosey has a new vanity. Very individual. "To R. R. from Freddie," is perforated in the metal and serves as a sifter for the powder. And her name is copied in her handwriting on the top.

We Women

By BETTY BRAINERD

A BRITISH judge recently valued a wife at two shillings and sixpence—a sum approximating sixty cents.

The husband in the case—a divorce action—sought £200 damages for the loss of his wife. In the absence of a jury it was up to the judge to decide the worth of the erring lady to her husband. Rightly or wrongly, he fixed the sum at the figure mentioned above.

On the face of it we should say that the wife's discomfiture over the decision would be worth as much to her erstwhile spouse as would have been the thousand dollars he did not obtain.

No one wants to be branded in the public prints as having a bargain-counter value.

We know lots of wives who are not worth even this small amount. And we know lots more whose value can not be estimated in terms of cold currency.

As a general rule we would be inclined to think that a wife is worth considerably less to her husband than she herself fondly believes; and considerably more than the husband rates her.

Wives so often consider their duty done when they live up to the letter of the marriage contract. So long as they look at no other man than their husbands they feel themselves free to be as nagging, as ill-tempered, as unlovely as they choose. Fidelity is a very fine thing and essential to the success of marriage but there are other virtues which are not to be overlooked. There is, for instance, the virtue of cheerfulness and that of fair play, a sense of sportsmanship, recognition of personality rights.

Too often the man regards himself a model husband when he provides his wife and family with an adequate supply of the material things of life. Frequently he wonders why, with her lodging, food and clothes forthcoming, his wife longs for a little money which she can call her own and dispense as she sees fit. He forgets that a domestic servant obtains wages in addition to her keep. He expects his wife to attend to a thousand and one household problems, even when she does not actually cook or sweep or wash dishes. He expects her to know what became of his green socks and where he hid his pipe, to be a sort of social Cerebus guarding his evenings from boredom, to balance his check-book, to nurse him when he is ill, to bear his children and then keep them quiet at night. Occasionally he hands her fifty dollars, gets in a temporary jam some evening and borrows back thirty of it—then wonders what she does with her allowance!

Sometimes a wife is not worth sixty cents—sometimes she's worth the tears of the angels and more than any mere husband could ever rake and scrape together!

Kidney Creole Style

Two beef kidneys, 4 tablespoons flour, 4 tablespoons bacon fat, 1 cup tomato juice, 2 tablespoons onion, 2 tablespoons minced green peppers, 1 cup boiling water or stock, 1½ teaspoons salt; ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Remove fat from kidneys and let latter stand over night in cold water to cover, containing little baking soda. Drain, dry and saute (fry) in bacon fat with pepper and onions. Add flour, toss about and pour in tomato and stock or water; add seasonings. Simmer till tender either over direct heat or in oven, and serve on buttered toast.

Codfish Omelet

Tear salt codfish into shreds, cover with cold water, let soak over night and drain. There should be two cups. Add equal quantity diced raw potatoes, cover with water and cook until potatoes are tender. Drain again, mash, add ½ cup cream, 1 beaten egg, ¼ teaspoon pepper and salt if needed. Melt 1 large tablespoon drippings in omelet pan, turn in mixture, cook until well browned, fold over, turn on heated platter and garnish with sprigs parsley.

Havey J. Boyle.

DANIEL M'GIBBENY, JR., aged 12, of Birmingham avenue, Carrick, sends in a story, entitled: "McGrew the Pitcher," in three chapters. We are sorry that space limitations prevent publication of the story in full, but to make up for this we shall try to give a resume of the plot.

One day Bob McGrew was walking along Grant street, when to his horror he saw a pretty girl in a horse-drawn buggy give a lurch as the horse took a notion to run away. Happily, even in those days of the horse and buggy there was an automobile handy and Bob, quick-witted, jumped into the machine and very soon he was alongside the runaway. With considerable daring he reached from the running board of the machine and grabbed the excited young lady from what were undoubtedly the jaws of death.

"If it hadn't been for you," said the girl to Bob, "I would have been killed." Bob laughed that one off. The author here shows an insight into his women as he causes his girl to ask suddenly of Bob: "Where do you work?" Perhaps she thought Bob was going to reply: "Oh, I just catch runaway horses," but as luck would have it Bob said: "I don't work at all. I want to be a baseball pitcher."

RIGHT here is where the long arm of coincidence gets into the story for the girl giggled a little and said it seemed too funny for anything, but the fact of that matter was her old man owned a baseball club and at that precise moment was looking for a pitcher. As luck would have it, Bob was a pitcher, and a pretty good one, as later events proved.

Bob got a job with the girl's old man and he won a pennant and not only pitched his club to a pennant, but in the big series won the deciding game, not only through his pitching, but also by his hitting. In the ninth inning of the final game, who came to the plate with three men on, two men out and the girl's old man's club three runs behind, but Bob himself! What he did to that ball was a pity. It was just a home run which allowed his club to score four runs to win out by the slim margin of one run.

STILL later, although not much later, as the author is not one to dally much once the climax is in sight, in a certain Baptist church, the author is particular to point out, there is the scent of orange blossoms, and from a quaint belfry ring out melodious wedding bells. Down the

ALDRIDGE, ELLIOTT TO HURL OPENER

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.
Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Dark clouds of gloom hang low over Skipper Donie Bush's Pirate bark today.

Breaking even with the Giants yesterday, the once bold and now comparatively docile Buccaneers registered no gain in the serious business of trying to overtake Chicago's charging Cubs, and the baseball barometer fails to predict any clearing of the skies in the immediate future.

Today and tomorrow the Corsairs will play single games with the Dodgers of Brooklyn, and on Monday they invade Boston for a five-game series. The prospect of dueling the Brooklynites, who have Elliott and the peerless Dazzy Vance ready for slab duty, is no tonic to Pirate nerves, but it is the long stand against Bancroft's Braves in Boston that the Bucs most fear.

SMITH SUED.

And not without good reason, for the Hubmen, ever a tough nut for the Bushwhackers to crack, have built up unusual fortifications in the form of a $15,000 civil suit against Earl Smith, hard-hitting ace of the Pirate catching staff. The suit is an outgrowth of the fight between Smith and Dave Bancroft, Braves pilot, at Forbes Field about six weeks ago.

Bancroft, charging that his health was impaired by Smith's knockout blow, yesterday announced that he will have Smith arrested and sued should he appear in Boston—and Banny has frightened Earl out of the trip.

Capt. Pie Traynor, realizing the urgent need of Smith's services in the impending fights, today tried to persuade Smith to risk arrest and accompany the Bucs to Boston, but Earl is adamant and refuses to heed his plea.

The seriousness of the situation is realized when it is recalled that the Braves won three straight games from the Bucs in their last series at Forbes Field.

Visions of a double victory over the Giants, that would have reduced the Chicago lead a full game, were blasted yesterday afternoon on the Polo Grounds when the Giants came through with a seventh-inning rally to defeat the Pittsburghers in the twilight struggle of a bargain bill. The Pirates won the first fight, 9 to

The Inside Story of DEMPSEY'S 'COMEBACK'

By Leo P. Flynn, Manager and Trainer of the former heavyweight Champion

(COPYRIGHT, 1927, BY UNIVERSAL SERVICE.)

CHAPTER III.

JACK DEMPSEY and I signed our contract at the Belmont Hotel on the afternoon of July 21. It did not take us 60 seconds to agree on the terms.

"There's only one thing I want to know, Jack," I told him. "Do you really think in your heart that I am your friend? Do you really believe that I'm with you heart and soul?"

"Certainly I do, Leo," he exclaimed. "If I wasn't sure of that, I wouldn't want you."

"Then I'll take the job with pleasure," I said. "I had to know first that you believed in me. If you didn't, you couldn't have confidence in what I would tell you, and in that event, we both would be wasting our time."

Mrs. Jack Dempsey gave me my first tip on what was wrong with Jack. She came in the room to meet me after we had concluded our business talk. She was nervous and excited. The Dempseys had another suite down the hall, and it was filled up with newspapermen, photographers and friends who wanted to see the champion. You'll have to excuse me if I refer to Dempsey as the "champion" in these articles. You'll understand why after he gets through with Tunney.

RUBS DISPENSED WITH.

Anyway, after the first greetings were over, Mrs. Dempsey turned to Jack and insisted that he take a nap.

"I want you to send all these people away, dear," she ordered. "You are too tired to talk any more this afternoon."

"I don't mean you, of course, Mr. Flynn," she continued. "He really needs to talk to you, but I think he has been under too great a strain to talk to anyone else this afternoon."

"I want him to get a good rub and lie down. He sleeps much better after Jerry gives him a massage, Mr. Flynn," she explained.

I didn't say anything, but I did some tall thinking. That was the first time I got hep to one of the things that was the matter with Dempsey.

Sure, he would sleep better after a rub. So would anyone. A hard massage is almost as effective as a shot of ether. It's entirely too exhausting for a fighter, in my opinion.

Needless to say, there was very little massaging done after I got Dempsey at our Saratoga camp. Dempsey had no strength to waste, and I think the results proved my theory was correct.

WIFE HELPED JACK.

While I am on the subject of Mrs. Dempsey, I want to say that she played a bigger part than anyone in helping her husband come back. I took care of the physical end of the job, and I had a lot of help, but Mrs. Dempsey took care of the mental end, and she did it all by herself. Dempsey went into the ring in better shape mentally than he ever was in his life, and he has his good wife to thank for that.

They talked over the long-distance telephone every night. At 9 o'clock, on the dot, the telephone bell in our cottage would jingle. It would be Mrs. Dempsey, away out in Los Angeles, calling up Jack to bid him good-night.

Those talks had a wonderful effect on Jack. No matter how tough the day had been, no matter what had come up to ruffle his nerves, nothing seemed to matter after he had talked with his wife. She was like a soothing syrup to him. He hit the hay as soon as she hung up, and he was asleep before you could say Jack Robinson.

IN GOOD CONDITION.

It takes a woman of unusual character to do what Mrs. Dempsey did. She left Jack at Saratoga, and traveled to California all alone. She wired him a cheerful message from every station along the road.

And when the tragedy of his brother's death came up, she took charge of everything. She superintended the shipment of the body and the funeral by telegraph. She's a peach, that girl is.

I think the telephone company will join me in applauding Mrs. Dempsey. She was a real good customer. I remember they talked $55 worth during the last two nights we were in camp.

I talked with Dempsey quite a bit during the last two days he spent in New York. I learned the second day that I had been mistaken in my first appraisal of him. He had been suffering from the long train ride, the inactivity and the subsequent excitement. It was only natural that he would look pale and peaked. Much to my relief, his color came back the next day, and I found that he was in much better shape than I had thought.

(In his next article, on Monday, Flynn will tell how he took command of Dempsey's training at Saratoga).

SPECIALISTS CALLED AS RELAPSE LOOMS

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Three specialists have been called into consultation by Estelle Taylor, wife of Jack Dempsey, following a somewhat serious turn in her condition, it was learned today. The excitement attending the trip from the Coast and the enthusiastic reception here was reported to have led the screen actress to fear a relapse.

Dempsey yesterday canceled all his engagements so that he could be with his wife until she is resting easier, and, although her condition is not regarded as alarming, he is devoting all his time to making her more comfortable.

Dempsey said he thought that if everything moved along as it is now she would be all right in a few weeks. His friends, however, expressed fears that he would worry too greatly and that this perhaps would affect his chances to beat Gene Tunney when they meet next month.

TEX SEES SELLOUT.

The fond dream of every boxing promoter—to sell every ticket in advance so that total receipts and boxers' percentages can be announced several hours before the contest—may be realized by Tex Rickard, entrepreneur of the Tunney-Dempsey championship match on Soldier Field, September 22.

Although the public seat sale will not open until Monday, thousands of seats already have been sold and orders for more are literally pouring into Rickard's office near here. Yesterday, a certified check for $26,000 for 900 ringside seats was received from a group of St. Louis fans. It was the largest single sale ever made by Rickard during his long connection with the boxing game.

SWIM TITLES AT STAKE

The senior low board diving championship and the senior 10-foot high board diving championship for women of the Allegheny Mountain Association, A. A. U., were the feature events of the swimming carnival held at Mineral Beach today. Among the contestants were: Mary L'Estrange, Al Fredler and Ida May Halstead.

Neale, Clarksburg's Pilot, to Quit Baseball

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Aug. 20—(AP.)—"I do not choose to return to baseball in 1928."

Thus laconically declared Earle Neale, manager of the Clarksburg club of the Middle Atlantic Baseball League today, when asked if he intended to manage the club next season. The Generals will have to look up another manager.

Neale has no definite plans for next summer, but says he will continue football coaching this winter.

A graduate of Wesleyan, Neale started coaching there, then went to Marietta and thence to Washington & Jefferson, where he turned out the famous champion team that held the University of Southern California to a scoreless tie in the Tournament of Roses. Lately he has been head athletic coach at the University of Virginia.

HAKES CROWNED JUNIOR CHAMP

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—A 17-year-old ornithologist with a knack of bagging birdies, today sported the western junior amateur golf crown.

Playing a brilliant pitching and putting game, Albert Hakes, of Dunkirk, N. Y., captured the prized title, open only to amateurs between 15 and 19 years, by downing Pat Ennis, of Chicago, after a hard-fought match which went to the thirty-seventh hole on the Indian Hill course yesterday.

His ability to bag birdies, which enabled him to come through a field of 266 contestants, brought the Dunkirk youth victory. Blocked by his opponent's almost flawless play, Hakes felt the title slipping from him on the thirty-fifth green when Ennis sank his third shot for a birdie, while the best Hakes could do was register par. Going to the thirty-sixth tee, one down, Hakes sank a 15-foot putt for a birdie. Then on the extra hole he landed his second shot, another chip, so accurately that it landed within five niches of the cup, barely missing an eagle.

GRAYS AND SPIDERWEBS MEET IN DUAL BILL TODAY

Two exceptionally high-class baseball games are scheduled at Forbes Field this afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock, when the Jamestown, N. Y., Spiderwebs hook up with the Homestead Grays, Pittsburgh's crack Negro team, rated about the best in the United States.

The Jamestown Spiderwebs and the Homestead Grays have met two times, the New Yorkers winning both games and beating Smoky Joe Williams each time. The scores were 3 to 1 and 2 to 0 and the Grays planned to enter today's game with a clean sweep as their goal. Joe Williams and Oscar Owens and Charley Britt are to be the Grays' pitchers with Hugh Bedient, who recently whitewashed the Grays with two hits, and Swede Erickson on the mound for the visitors.

Gehrig Hits 39, Leads Ruth Again in Homer Derby

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(INS.)—The home run duel between Buster Gehrig and Babe Ruth is getting hotter as the Yankees swing through the West. After Ruth had made a great spurt to tie him, Gehrig forged to the front again by hitting No. 39 against the White Sox yesterday.

Betting commissioners here, however, are laying 7 to 5 that Ruth will be ahead of Gehrig at the end of the season.

DAMON RUNYON SAYS

DAMON RUNYON

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—I judge my old friend Mr. Josephus Humphreys, the silver-tongued orator of the roped arena, is a strong admirer of Tony Canzoneri, the Brooklyn bantam, who flattened Pete Sarmiento in a round the other night.

So am I. In fact, probably the first time Canzoneri's name was ever mentioned as an important pugilistic possibility was in this column through a letter from the late Silvey Burns, who knew more about the prospects of the small clubs of the big town than any man in the business.

I think Canzoneri is one of the best little fighters I ever saw. But I must call upon Mr. Josephus Humphreys for a bill of particulars in his invariable announcement in introducing Canzoneri—"the next champion of his class."

Perhaps he is. I will go farther and say I hope so. But what class does Mr. Humphreys mean? The bantamweight class, which calls for 118 pounds at 2 o'clock? Or the featherweight class, which demands 126 pounds at the same hour? Tony Canzoneri at 124 pounds the other night was sort o' betwixt and between, and Mr Humphreys' declaration leaves me somewhat confused.

If he has reference to the bantamweight class, I wonder if Mr. Humphreys ever heard of one Buddy Taylor of Terre Haute, Ind., a little blond thunderbolt who has beaten Canzoneri to a referee's decision? And if he means the featherweight class, I wonder if Mr Humphreys knows of Benjamin Bass of Philadelphia, or Red Chapman of Boston, or even Charley Phil Rosenberg of New York?

I NEVER before knew Mr. Humphreys to be so positive as to the future of a young boxer. In the main he is inclined to be rather skeptical as he presents the boys to the multitudes, with but very sketchy references to their status and their hopes.

He may be correct in this instance. But the next time he presents Tony Canzoneri as "the next champion of his class," I hope and trust, as Mr. Humphrey himself might say, that he tells us what class. He may have the lightweight class in mind, for all I know.

They drew around $35,000 in Ebbets Field for the Canzoneri-Sarmiento show, with $3 tops that I induced Mr. Tom McArdle to try at the Queensboro arena with no little success. I am told that there was a considerable profit for the Ebbets Field promoters, and I am also informed that business has picked up at the Queensboro to such an extent that the deficit of the early season is rapidly being cut down, and may be turned into a profit before the cold weather closes the gates.

It proves my contention that the ringworms are in New York, but that it takes the sunshine of a good card at reasonable prices to start 'em to wigglin'. And you cannot fool them. They know a good card the instant it is announced. The rumble from the mob at the ring side that follows the announcer's statement of the next act is the vocal barometer of business.

MY famous west coast operative, T-49, otherwise Mr Hap O'Connor, advises me at length of Lynn Larry, the Oakland shortstop, who is quoted at $100,000 in the baseball market, also of Lynn Larry's little pal, Jimmy Reese, the Oakland second baseman. They call Larry and Reese "the keystone twins" out yonder, and Mr O'Connor assures me that they are what he calls "lilies."

They look alike. They sleep together. They are the same age—22, and each weighs 160 pounds. I gather from Mr O'Connor's remarks that he regards them as excellent baseball prospects, and Mr O'Connor is seldom wrong in this respect. It was Mr. O'Connor who raved to me about the Waner boys, especially Paul, before they went to the Pittsburgh club to fulfill all his predictions.

A number of big league scouts, including Jack Doyle of the Cubs, Leslie Nunamaker of Cleveland, Vinegar Bill Essick of the Yanks, Danny Long of the White Sox and Sam Crawford of the Giants have been looking "the keystone twins" over, though Mr. O'Connor thinks Doyle is really after Fenton, the Oakland first baseman. The scouts price Larry and Reese much lower than they are tagged by their owners, but Mr. O'Connor says they are worth plenty of money.

He seems to think Reese is the more valuable player of the pair in some respects, though Larry is the one most of the scouts fancy. Mr. O'Connor says Reese is twice as smart as Larry. Reese was once the bat boy for the Los Angeles club, while Larry comes from a Visalia high school. Larry is a right-hand hitter, with a great throwing arm, while Reese is a left-hand hitter who is very cunning at the plate, dodging around in a manner that befuddles even the umpires.

DEL and Ivan Howard, who own the Oakland club, would like to see the boys go to the same big league outfit together because they are a perfect team around second base. However, Mr. O'Connor says most of the scouts want Larry alone.

Fenton, the first baseman, is a hard right-hand hitter, and Mr. O'Connor says that next to Larry he is the most finished baseball player in the Pacific Coast League, with the possible exception of Larry.

"Jack Doyle says there ain't no good baseball players in around Hollywood or Los Angeles," Mr. O'Connor remarks. "He says there are too many cake eaters here and that San Francisco is the place for the young ball player with the old stomach."

By which, my friends, Mr. Doyle, who was known as "Scrappy Jack" in his day, probably has reference to what is vulgarly known as "guts," meaning courage.

Mr. O'Connor says they want big league baseball out on the Pacific Coast, and to prove it he cites the fact that the Cubs and the Pirates drew the biggest crowds of the season there in their early spring games. At one morning game in San Francisco between the Pirates and the Seals, 10,000 fans were out.

It seems that Mr. Mark Kelly, the able sports editor of the Los Angeles Examiner, agrees with Mr. O'Connor, and has figured out that airplanes could make the jump with the ball players from Chicago to Los Angeles in 30 hours, leaving Chicago on Sunday night and arriving in time to play Tuesday.

Bears Hold Top Perch

By ASSOCIATED PRESS.

THREATENING clouds hovering over the National League peak occupied by the hardy Cubs were swiftly drifting away today as the foremost contenders pulled out of their first skirmishes of the current East-West combat without material change in the championship lineup.

The National circuit sagged yesterday under four double headers, the Bruins dashing away with an equal break in Brooklyn while everything was even Stephen with the Pirates and Giants as well as with the Cards and the Braves. Chicago's hold on first place continued at five games over the Corsairs.

BLAKE BEATS ROBINS.

One Sheriff Blake handcuffed the Robins with five hits as his mates whitewashed Brooklyn for their twelfth shutout, 2 to 0. In the succeeding fracas, however, McWeeny eased Wrigley's hen house down with five safeties for a 6 to 1 verdict.

Pittsburgh pummeled the Giants in the opening melee by 9 to 3, holding an eight-run carnival in the seventh inning to wipe away the effects of Rogers Hornsby's twenty first homer and one by Terry. The New Yorkers went back for the nightcap, Grimes limiting the Buccaneers to five hits, two of which were mammoth pokes by Paul Waner and Smith. The score was 5 to 2. Like the Cubs, the Pirates split evenly in the four-game tilt and trekked to Brooklyn where they hoped to make a noticeable advance before running the Bancroftian gauntlet at Boston.

Kent Greenfield handed out only a pair of singles as Boston took the world champs into camp in the first part of a twin program by 6 to 1, but behind Pitcher Sherdel the Cards made off with the afterpiece by the same score.

REDS WIN TWO

Cincinnati bumped the Phillies off twice by 3 to 2 in 10 innings and 1 to 0, Red Lucas holding Philadelphia to five hits in the shutout.

Blankenship staved off a squelching for the White Sox by defeating the Yanks in the fourth and final clash of the series by 3 to 2. Lou Gehrig broke loose with home run No. 39 in the ninth, his first in 10 days, giving him a jump of one on Babe Ruth.

Rube Walberg came through with a timely single in the eighth inning to drive in two runners for a 5 to 3 Philadelphia triumph over the Indians, making it four out of five for the Athletics. Walberg fanned seven batters.

Wingard checked the Senators with six hits, while St. Louis annexed its third straight by 6 to 1, the Browns' hurler poling for the circuit with one on in the sixth.

A double victory over the Red Sox by 5 to 2 and 14 to 7 pushed the Bengals to within one game of the second place Washingtons. It also gave the Detroiters nine in a row. The Red Hose worked a triple play in the eighth inning of the second game when Fothergill lined to Myer, who tossed to Regan, doubling Heilmann at second, and on a relay to Todt, Manush was caught off first.

BANCROFT SUES EARL SMITH

BOSTON, Aug. 20.—Manager Dave Bancroft, of the Braves, has brought a $15,000 suit for damages against Earl Smith, catcher of the Pittsburgh Pirates. The suit is "in the making" with several legal formalities to be complied with. In the first place, they have got to catch Smith, the catcher, before they can get very far with it. Papers must be served on the pugilistic Pirate within the confines of Massachusetts before matters can proceed to a real legal clinch.

On the last visit of the Pirates here it looked as though this legal detail might be accomplished. Smith had rejoined the Pirate club following his suspension and had caught in one of the games, either because Smith wanted to show that he wasn't afraid of, or because Manager Donie Bush wanted to see what reaction would occur. There was no outbreak. The next day, however, when Smith was not catching, a deputy sheriff came, not to take in the game, but to take in Smith.

It looks as if Smith would do no more catching here this year, and if he remains a good catcher next season and works here, the sheriff will serve those papers, and Smith or his club will have to find a big bond.

Bancroft sets forth in his declaration that he was assaulted without provocation, without his knowledge and from behind, and that he was knocked unconscious.

JUST ANOTHER HELEN

AND FROM CALIFORNA

First there was Helen Wills and then Helen Jacobs, and now there's another Helen from California who is a tennis star. Shes Miss Helen Zabriskie, San Francisco's greatest girl swimmer, who recently returned to Northern California after breaking the National breast stroke record at Pasadena. While at Pasadena, Helen demonstrated her athletic versatility, competing in golf, tennis, archery, trapshooting, horseback riding and swimming. Above she's shown in action on the tennis court.

RANK OUTSIDER NETS BACKERS BIG RETURN

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—The length of two horses was all that stood between a small pot of gold and the backers of Rionda in the third race at Hawthorne yesterday. The horse, virtually ignored in the mutuels betting, galloped under the wire for show money at a price of $726.24 to $1 to win. Those who did back the outsider collected $52.98 on their $2 tickets for third money.

MONTGOMERY NAMED MT. JACKSON MENTOR

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Aug. 20.—Paul E. Montgomery, of this city, star athlete of Westminster College previous to his graduation last spring, will be an instructor at the Mt. Jackson High school during the coming school year. Montgomery was captain of the Westminster varsity football team last season.

Tunney Has His Jimmy Bronson

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

JACK DEMPSEY may have his Leo P. Flynn to guide him farther along the Comeback Trail, but Gene Tunney, whom he meets in Chicago next month in an attempt to regain his world's heavyweight title, has his Jimmy Bronson.

Bronson, one of the wisest men in the boxing game, is the mentor who was behind Tunney in the Sesqui-Centennial arena in Philadelphia that night last fall when Gene shocked the world by decisively outpointing Dempsey, and he will be in the former Marine's corner again when the second act of the high finance drama is staged in Soldiers' Memorial Stadium.

No announcement has been made to this effect, but Bronson has been in close contact with Gene ever since that fateful night last year, and I have just received a letter from Lou Brown, Bronson's partner in the managing racket, in which Lou appends a P. S., to the effect that Bronson has been away on a 10-day motor trip during which he visited with Tunney at Speculator, N. Y. That's all Lou says about it, but the footnote speaks volumes. It tells me that Jimmy and Gene have had their heads together, and that's enough for me. They'll be doing business together again on the night of September 22, with Bronson acting in the role of chief second and corner boss, although Billy Gibson is Gene's manager.

BRONSON is a great man to inspire confidence in the boxers he handles. I know he played a great part in helping Tunney to steel himself mentally for the fray with Dempsey last year and in shaping Gene's line of battle. For instance, it was Jim who told Gene he believed it was in the cards for the last of the good soldier fighters to dethrone Dempsey and it was Jim who implanted in Gene the idea of letting go a right hand punch to Dempsey's jaw with everything he had behind it in the first few seconds of the fight. That punch went home and stopped Dempsey dead in his tracks and he was through for the night, although he went through the motions to the end of the 10 rounds in the downpour of rain.

Leo P. Flynn's training and strategy in handling Dempsey were given considerable credit for the former champion's winning fight against Jack Sharkey recently, and the wily Leo is expected to play a leading role again in the forthcoming return engagement with Tunney.

But if Dempsey has his Leo P. Flynn, Tunney has his Jimmy Bronson.

Let the battle be on.

And have a care, Tex Rickard, that the duel of wits between the seconds does not outshine the war of fists between the actual combatants!

SPORT LENS

aisle march proudly Bob and, but you have guessed it, the young lady whom he had saved from the runaway horse. A benign minister smiles a fatherly benediction on the approaching pair.

THIS, we believe, is the young author's first work. He takes the romance of sport as his vehicle, plus of course the adventure of the runaway. He is, one can see, a romanticist. He is of the writing school which flourished a long time ago, a school which went on the hypothesis that all stories should end with the wedding bells. He comes from the fairy tale class which, after having wound up a story, with a marriage, assumed that the couple would live happily ever afterward.

He has many predecessors and can cite many authors of the past who have walked this same path. There is an affinity between this young author and Harold Bell Wright and Zane Grey, story tellers, who blithely imagine that a life is pretty well lived once the marriage ceremony is performed.

LATER he may join the realistic school, in which are such men as Sinclair Lewis, Theodore Dreiser and Sherwood Anderson, but for his peace of mind we trust Mr. McGibbeny will stick to the romance type and that he will not be taken in by the realistic school. The realists, after all, are all quite unhappy. The romanticists, failing to see anything but happiness and joy in the world, live a peaceful existence, in contrast to the dark thoughts of the Lewises and Dreisers and Andersons, who somehow believe that in life their are pain, sorrow, death and considerable corruption.

The plot is not a new one, by any means, but yet far more celebrated authors have won much more acclaim by plots not much more subtle than Mr. McGibbeny's. We are struck mainly by the author's shrewdness in regard to women.

THAT was a splendid stroke showing with one dash of the pen the perennial curiosity of women who forever are asking questions. Imagine the knavery of the boy-author in causing the heroine, just out of the jaws of death, to ask her rescuer: "Where do you work?" What a time to ask such a question! Yet it is very true to life. Women, as the author shrewdly points out in this subtle way, are forever asking questions. Even with death not far away the girl's curiosity is typical.

THE urge to write plainly is upon our young author, but he gives us a chill when in an informal preface he notes he is ambitious to be a sport writer. Here he is on the wrong path. No noted author, save Mr. Lardner, was a sport writer. Quite a few of the popular type like Mr. Cobb and Mr. Ade were newspapermen, but never got into sports. Once, a sport writer, Charles E. Van Loan, gave promises, but his fame was fleeting and his works have not lived. Sport writers, selecting sport themes, cannot possibly bid for great fame. Their material is not important enough. In all literature there is not one story of sports that still lives, although countless have been written. The best ever written is Shaw's "Cashel Byron's Profession." Further, of the millions of lines written yearly by many sport writers not one has ever struck upon one single sentence that has lived much longer than a day.

WICHITA, Kan., Aug. 20.—Archie Campbell, 21-year-old right-hand pitcher of the Wichita Club of the Western League, has been sold to the New York Yankees and will report next spring. The purchase price was withheld.

PIRATES

3. The score of the second contest was 5 to 2.

It was a big 50-50 afternoon for all four of the flag contenders. The Cubs and Dodgers divided a dual bill in Flatbush, while, in Boston, the Cardinals had to be satisfied with an even split in their mixup with the Braves. Consequently there is no change in the respective standings of the leaders.

STAGE EIGHT-RUN RALLY.

After landing a triumph in the first fight by putting over a seventh-inning drive that netted eight runs, the Bushwackers jumped out in front of the Giants in the second game and up to the sixth the Giants were blanked.

After pitching five beautiful innings in the nightcap, Ray Kremer weakened. The Giants scored once in the sixth and in the seventh they piled up three tallies and decided the contest. In the opener, Lee Meadows reeled off his sixteenth success of the season.

Five of those joke homers were parts of the afternoon's fun. The Giants made three of them, Hornsby, Terry and Jackson reaching the close-up parts, while Paul Waner and Earl Smith sank them in the seats for the Pirates. The circuit swats of Brother Paul and Smith represented our only tallies of the second clash.

Hitting for Grantham in the seventh inning of the first game, Ki Cuyler cleaned the sacks of three mates, his blow being the most exciting part of a big round. The Pirates made 10 hits as they put the game on ice. Dutch Henry, a southpaw, had just relieved Larry Benton and it was Grantham's turn to bat. Manager Bush used good strategy in putting Cuyler up to swing at the southpaw. Ki planted a liner between Roush and Lindstrom.

BENTON STOPPED.

Larry Benton had won eight in a row and was after his ninth when the Pirates shelled him off the hill. Burleigh Grimes tamed the Pirates in the second game, holding them to five blows.

While the Pirate strategy was good in the first game it was questionable, to say the least, in the twilight affair. The Giants were trailing by a run as they batted in the seventh. Melvin Ott started with a double and he moved to third as Roush was thrown out. Kremer made a fine stop of Hornsby's hot smash and threw to Traynor who flipped the ball to Smith and Ott was touched out. Hornsby reached second.

MOTORCYCLE SPEED RACES HELD AT SCHENLEY OVAL

The Greater Pittsburgh Motorcycle Club and the Western Pennsylvania Motorcycle Dealers' Association staged a meet on the half-mile dirt track in Schenley Oval this afternoon. Starter John T. Taylor sent nine of the best motor-bike drivers in the country off on their first race at 2 o'clock.

The entry list included the names of Alex P. MacDonell, Waddy Wardrop, Robert Baker, Lewis Richardson, Detroit; Andy Little, Springfield, O.; Walter Stoddard, Hagerstown, Mich., W. W. Williams, Greary Creek, Ky., Frank Brown, South Williamsport, Pa.; Rudy Adams, Leo Donovan, Washington, D. C.; Clarence Squibb, Battle Creek, Mich.; John E. Bodnar, L. E. Conroy and Ted Andres, Pittsburgh.

The program includes one-mile time trials in which each rider is sent off individually and clocked as he completes the second lap, three-mile solo, five-mile sidecar, five-mile solo, 10-mile sidecar, 15-mile solo and a five-mile amateur race.

CHILLY SAUCE BY CHILLY DOYLE

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Nobody, including Mr. Wrigley, knows the amount of the Cub owner's fortune; Wrigley has acquired so much cash that another million here or there may not make so much difference, yet the profit to be made by the hustling Cubs in the National League championship this season would stand out as a tremendous fortune to the average person.

THE silly stuff handed out about Chicago successes being swayed by increased Wrigley Field is a laughing matter with those who know the real fervor of the players involved in the present flag scrap. The misguided folks who "fall" for this sort of chatter should know that Cincinnati also added to its park, but there has been little talk of the Reds copping the flag on this account.

AND speaking of clubs that make money for their owners, don't overlook those Pirates of 1921—the same team that cracked about this time of year after coming to the Polo Grounds with a lead of seven and one-half games.

CASEY STENGEL once remarked that the club referred to "almost stole the pennant." Casey apparently meant that the team was not of championship caliber, but was a care-free aggregation that had stayed on top through hustle and team-play.

WELL, to get back to the money-making theme, the Pirates of 1921 made more money in one season than any other Pittsburgh club. There may have been many reasons for this, but one of them was the color contained in the lineup of the team.

MANY fans came out to hear the quartet sing or to laugh at the antics of Maranville, who played stellar ball while entertaining on the side. I know that Ring Lardner had a habit of bringing his boys out to watch Rabbit, although it was hard to tell whether Ring or the kids laughed the heartiest.

THE Pirates of that vintage played to almost one and one-half million fans at home and abroad. The appealing club now representing the city will not equal that total unless there are some exceptional crowds out in the remaining days of the season. All of which would seem to indicate that many fans like a dash of flavor in their baseball.

MANAGER M'GRAW of the Giants is a fine sportsman in many ways. Five minutes after the defeat of his club in the first game yesterday, I met him in Harry Stevens' quarters beneath the grandstand where he had gone to enjoy a sandwich and cup of coffee.

"YOUR club has a dandy chance to win," said the Giant pilot. "Six years ago the Pirates were leading by seven and one-half games as they came to the Polo Grounds a few days later than the present date of August. Our defeat column showed eight more losses than that of the Pittsburgh team, yet we were able to overtake the Pirates and win the pennant."

"MORE than 40 games are still to be played, and a lot can happen in 40 ball games," concluded John J.

THE winning of a doubleheader constitutes a big day's work for any ball nine. For 15 innings of yesterday afternoon, the Pirates were in a fine position to gain this big result, but the seventh inning of the twilight struggle changed everything.

ALL four flag contenders were tangled up in dual fights, which provided a fine opportunity for somebody, but at the end of the long afternoon the setting was the same as before the fights started.

LAYDEN TO ARRIVE TODAY FOR GRID CONFERENCE

Elmer Layden, former Notre Dame football star, who has been signed to coach at Duquesne University this fall, was expected to arrive in Pittsburgh some time today to discuss football prospects at the Bluff school.

John Holohan, manager of athletics at the Bluff school, received a wire from the former member of the famous "Four Horsemen" stating that he would reach Pittsburgh today.

The arrival of Layden is expected to stir up football interest at Duquesne.

DORMONT AT BELLEVUE

Dormont invades Bellevue tonight for the last time this season. They will be set to give Bellevue the battle of the season, as Bellevue has won most of their games with them so far. Abe Martin or Leo Carroll should both be in condition to start good games. Carl Stewart will more than likely do the hurling for Bellevue, since he has had two victories over Dormont so far this year.

Salient Points of the Bidding

After West's Heart bid, North, though holding normal support for his partner's bid of Clubs and a legitimate assist, can see no hope for game at Clubs, so makes the independent Diamond bid in hopes that his partner may be able to arrive at a game-going declaration. With the knowledge that Diamonds are stopped, South bids No Trump.

Salient Points of the Play

Tricks 11 to 13. West must bare his Ace of Hearts to protect his Spades, and being placed in the lead with a Heart is compelled to lead up to the Ace-Queen of Spades, thus giving Declarer a Small Slam.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

How Modern Skyscrapers Relieve the Congestion

The fact is that skyscrapers do not cause congestion but relieve congestion. This nullifies the chief argument used by the opponents of higher buildings in Pittsburgh and justifies the action of Pittsburgh Council and Mayor Kline in raising the limit from 265 to 425 feet.

The value of tall buildings in lessening pedestrian traffic in the densely populated business districts, like the Golden Triangle in Pittsburgh, was demonstrated in an interesting way by Harvey Wiley Corbett, of New York, speaking at the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce in Washington. Mr. Corbett said

"From the twenty-eighth story of the Equitable Building to the tenth floor of the Bankers' Trust in New York is a quick jump, because the travel is mostly vertical. Flatten out the financial district to eight or ten stories and those offices might be ten or twelve blocks apart, and the traffic on the surface would be just that much more congested.

"There is as much vertical traffic as horizontal in New York's financial district during business hours, maybe more. In fact it would not be difficult to prove by means of a careful survey that in this section of the city there is less traffic congestion, both pedestrian and vehicular, during the important hours than in sections where the average building height is less than one-third what it is downtown."

The important fact is that the modern skyscraper, by the use of elevators, takes a huge volume of travel off the horizontal streets, where congestion occurs, and carries that travel all day long up and down in special traffic lanes of its own. In other words, to abolish the skyscraper would be to increase the very street congestion which the anti skyscraper people complain about.

Congress Should Provide For Defense by Training

This country does not want a large army. It does want an adequate defense from attack.

The way to have an adequate defense without having a large army is to have a country-wide military training for the youth of the country so that, in case of attack, they are prepared to defend it.

That is not militarism. On the contrary, it is the best antidote for militarism.

At the present time our chief military training for youth is in the National Guard, which is a state matter. The Federal government helps by maintaining citizens' military training camps each summer, and by supplying officers and material for colleges and schools that want their boys instructed in the handling of arms.

The citizens' military training camps this year were, in the language of finance, "oversubscribed." There were thousands of young men who could not be accommodated.

Congress next session should make generous appropriations for expanding these camps, which, apart from their military value, teach the youth patriotism, discipline, orderly habits and hygiene.

There are scores of schools and colleges which are on the waiting list of the War Department, applying for military instructors, but not supplied because the War Department has not the funds. This, also, is a need for which Congress should appropriate.

There is no excuse for the richest nation on earth refusing the plea of its young men for an opportunity to learn the rudiments of national defense.

Promote Lower Court Judges Who Make Good

Everyone is united in the demand that the judiciary shall be kept nonpartisan. This means that both parties shall unite in renominating every judge who has creditably served out his term and is up for re-election.

This principal should apply to the municipal courts as well as the higher courts.

It is further suggested that, when there are vacancies in the higher courts, the political party should fill these vacancies only by promoting judges who have served five years creditably in the lower courts. It is claimed that this practice would assure experience and talent in the higher courts, and would attract capable men into the judiciary because it would be an established career.

It is doubtful whether this could be established as a principle to be always carried out. The available judges in the lower courts might sometimes offer too limited a choice for higher court positions. The higher courts would miss any opportunity of making judges out of distinguished lawyers, willing to accept an eminent judicial position, but unwilling to go through a lower court apprenticeship in order to attain it.

Nevertheless, there is merit in the suggestion of promoting judges. In the majority of cases, suitable judges can be found to promote. The political parties should more frequently keep the idea in mind and act on it.

Trade Conditions in Europe and in the United States

One of our most eminent unofficial ambassadors, Mr. Silas Strawn, who goes to China for the government and to Sweden for the Association of Commerce, returns to say that the European tariffs are stifling trade.

"Europe," he says, "is paving with tariffs the road to economic suicide."

The impossible if patriotic longing of each European country to be self-contained is what gives rise to most international difficulties. Ever smoke a cigaret in England? The cigarets you buy are advertised and sold as all-British—though the tobacco in them grew in Virginia. The point of view is as pathetic and as hopeless as the country storekeeper's plea to shop at home and not buy from the city mail-order houses.

Nature in her wisdom has provided each country with specialties. Man with his ingenuity has perfected in every locality some special technique which makes manufacture there cheaper and more profitable. The free exchange among countries not widely resourceful is like water flowing down hill; the tariffs seek to make it flow up hill instead, but only succeed in damming it into stagnation.

Imagine every state in the Union with a tariff on the products and manufactures of every other state, and you will have a picture of the effect of European tariffs on European trade.

Amid the welter of discontent the United States stands out as prosperous because it is as a unit practically the realization of the ideal of self-containment. The same arguments that convict the small European countries of tariff folly apply to convince Americans of tariff wisdom. This country can do what less resourceful countries will kill themselves off trying to do.

More Truth Than Poetry
by S. E. Kiser

Slumber Song

IT'S against the modern method now to sing a lullaby—
We must put our little darling down and let her have her cry,
And the fishermen may go to sea
And watch the stars shine merrily
And cast their nets in waters deep
While baby cries herself to sleep.

THE mother mustn't rock her babe and croon a little song;
That sweet and lovely cuddle hour is absolutely wrong.
So let the dream ship slip away
To find the port where fairies play,
And let the shepherds watch their sheep
While baby cries herself to sleep.

IT WAS the good old lullaby which ruined you and me.
They spoiled us when they sang to us as all can plainly see.
Instead of hearing pretty tunes
Of sugar plums and pink balloons
They should have scorned such music cheap
And let us cry ourselves to sleep.

Be a Good Listener

IT is possible that the reason you cannot get on friendly terms with those with whom you would like to mingle, is that you talk too much.

A talkative person grows tiresome.

You may have the erroneous idea that in order to prove your good nature, your sociability, you must keep up a steady stream of talk.

Too eager, you overstep to the point where you don't give others a chance to say what they would like to say.

The person who monopolizes conversation is not popular.

Did you ever try being a good listener?

Interested listeners are in demand as well as those who have something witty or bright to offer, or some enlightening thought to give.

It is only those who think little and talk much who keep up a perpetual stream of forced conversation.

Tales that are Told

Nothing Doing

PRESIDENT FAIRFAX HARRISON, of the Southern Railway Company, condemning a mismanaged corporation, said at a luncheon at Belvoir, his residence in Virginia:

"It reminds me of the Browns. The Browns were a young married couple. They spent their two-weeks' vacation at the shore, and when they started for home they were broke, absolutely broke.

"Brown on the train felt terrible; his next pay day was a month off; but as they neared home his young wife gave a merry laugh and said:

"'I'm going to tell you a secret that will cheer you up, Billy. I saved $90 from my housekeeping last year, and I hid it in the hall closet before we started off.'

"'Yes,' said poor Brown, 'I found it.'"

Disguising the Bait

THE city visitor was supercillious and inquisitive. He had wandered about the little country town, noisily and offensively amused at its rustic simplicity. In his meanderings he came upon a native fishing in a stream. The old fellow was gazing intently at an apple which dangled from the hook on his line.

The city man approached.

"I say, old fellow, what are you doing there?" he asked, obviously amused.

"Fishin'," said teh native, without looking up.

"Well, what's the apple for?"

"Bait."

"Bait? Aren't you using a worm?"

"Yes."

"Well, where is it?"

"In the apple."

New York Day by Day
by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Aug. 20—New York has its prototype of the Main Street Babbitt etched as distinctly as the figure Sinclair Lewis portrayed wearing white sox, hailing friends with Rotarian thumps on the back and boosting a new development on Floral Heights.

The Manhattan product is not always merry and bright. And his life runs in a more pronounced groove. He stands on the curb at sun-up to wait for every parade and will remark to his neighbor proudly that he marched with the militia for 15 years.

He goes in for the various "better week" movements enthusiastically. He can tell you what happened to Andy Gump in any given week. He spreads his two weeks' vacation out over the year with various afternoons off to attend lodge celebrations. He is outer guard of one lodge at least.

He brings his lunch to town in a tin box and attends all the graduation exercises of his children's friends. His wife is "the old lady" and he knows where one may see the big first run reels at 25-cent family theaters.

He is almost invariably temperate and a loyal worker who rarely gets a rise in salary but expects it just the same. His pencil is held by a vest pocket clip and his small change is in a snap purse. He is on friendly speaking terms with crossing cops, street sweepers, corner bootblacks and elevator runners.

This is no effort to belittle his simple tastes for he is a first rate citizen who rarely receives consideration he deserves. Babbitry in small cities is expressed with a gusto. It preens itself with a thumb in the suspender flair.

In New York one finds it eddied into back waters of life. The Babbitt here has not the expansive manners of the show-off. He has that crushing meekness a big city bestows on those who, often through no fault of their own, have been unable to rise above obscure jobs.

* * *

While Chicago has been dubbed the Windy City, the velocity of wind in New York reaches greater speed. The two windiest corners are at Twenty-third and Fifty-seventh and Broadway. Those two corners were always well packed with idlers and then short skirts came in, ha, ha.

* * *

A telephone exchange in Mayor Walker's neighborhood is named Walker.

* * *

It has been told that the idea of calling the exchange in the theatrical district Rialto was once considered, but it was changed to Wisconsin. Publicity seekers have often sought to have exchanges named for them to no avail. The telephone company relies on experts to name exchanges. They select names easiest understood.

* * *

It is presumed the system of telephone enunciation is somewhat akin to an idea those of us learned who sent 10 cents to Dept. J., Hohokus, N. J., in our youth to purchase one of those "Surprise Your Friends—Become a Ventriloquist" books. If memory serves, the ventriloquist student must always change "b" to "v" to keep lips from moving. Thus Alabama became Alavama. In like manner there are certain letters that throw a word out of kilter over the telephone. And as I read over what I have written I seem to have become involved in something that sounds pretty senseless. Still I mean well.

* * *

Word seeps over from the East Side that the radio has struck a fatal blow to another favored institution. The hurdy-gurdy is passing. Its tinny tunes no longer inspire dancing in the streets. Children dance to newer tunes of the radio. Street bands and lone musicians have also suffered in like manner.

* * *

Hurdy-gurdies used to be rented for $1.50 a day. One man owned more than 100 and was known as the Hurdy-Gurdy King.

The Pacific Era
By DR. FRANK CRANE

Roger W. Babson, the well-known statistician and economist, in an address the other day said that:

"If statistics mean anything, the Pacific Coast will be the most active and densely populated section of the United States in the future."

For this he gives three reasons,

The first is that the conditions of life are pleasant in California. There is no snow or ice, the climate is benign, the earthquakes are negligible and altogether human life can be carried on more agreebly than elsewhere.

People are ruled by their feelings. As a rule they go where it is the most pleasant.

California has an advantage over other places in that its climate is not enervating. It has semi-tropical luxuriance; at the same time it does not have the debilitating weather such as we find in Cuba.

The second reason he gives is that the West Coast has decided agricultural advantages over the rest of the country. As a nation increases and progresses, its demand for wheat and corn declines. As it waxes prosperous it consumes more fruit, green vegetables and nuts.

All these things thrive on the Pacific Coast. The answer is that this Coast is increasing at the expense of the decline of the Middle West.

This increase, due to pleasanter conditions of life and to the right kind of crops, is evidenced in bank clearings, railroad earnings and foreign trade. The city of Los Angeles has probably grown faster and is growing faster than any city in the country. A good deal of good-humored fun is poked at Southern Californians for their boosting, as the prosperity of Los Angeles is unexampled.

The third reason Mr. Babson gives is that the coming is to be a Pacific Ocean era. The Pacific is destined to excel the Atlantic in world commerce. He declared that Europe had shot its bolt with the World War and that for the next fifty years it will decline.

The world has long been under the dominance of Europe. America heretofore has been a European colony, culturally speaking.

With the significant growth and changes taking place in China and Japan and with the Pacific Ocean traffic, this dominance of Europe is severely threatened.

The Pacific Ocean will be the market place of the world, said Mr. Babson, in the next generation.

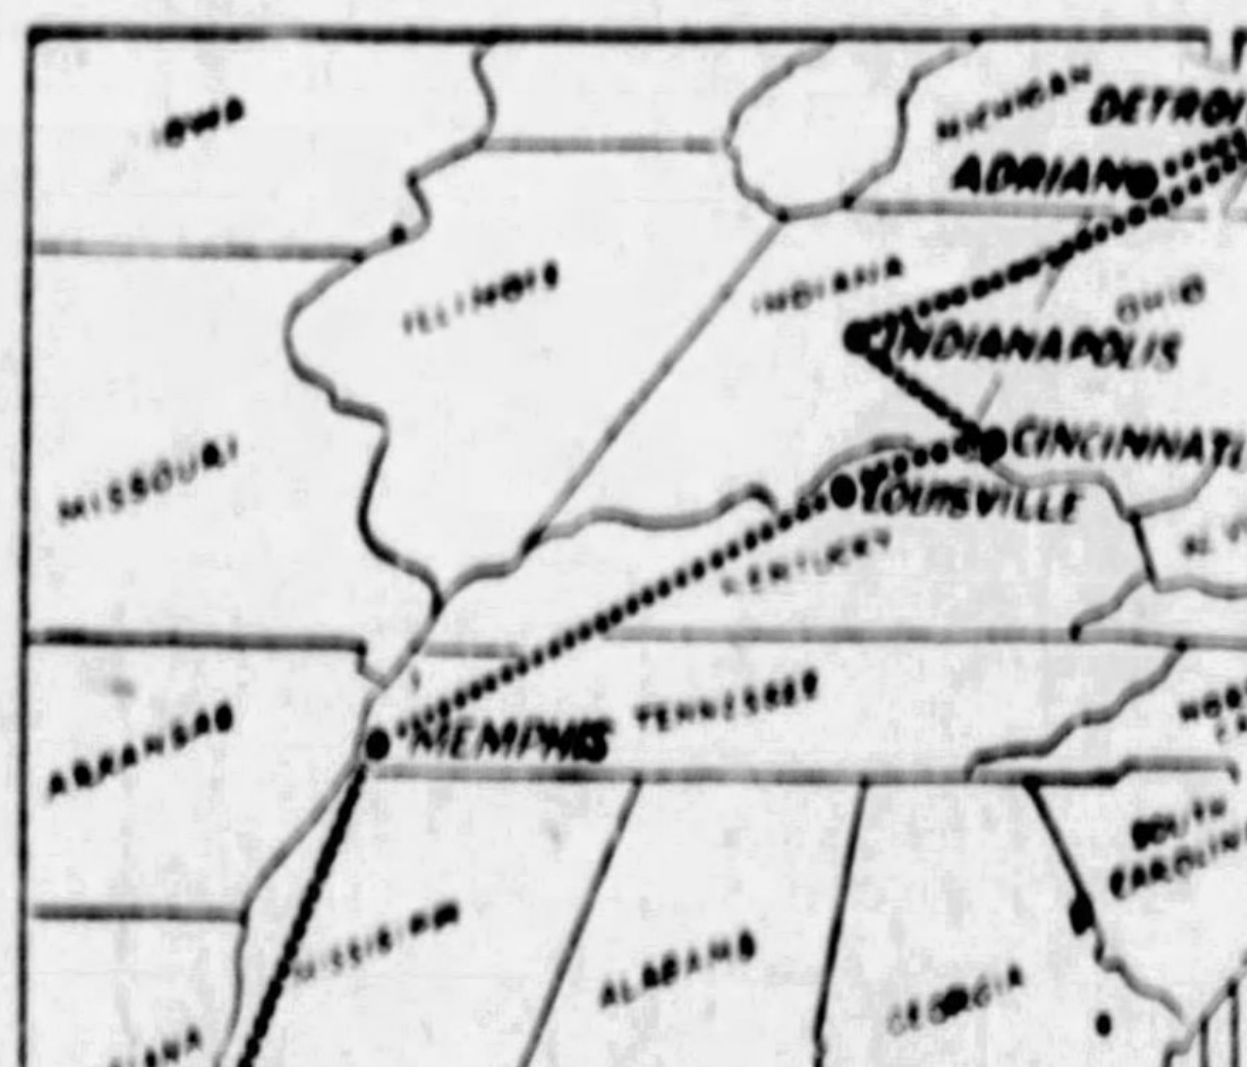
THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

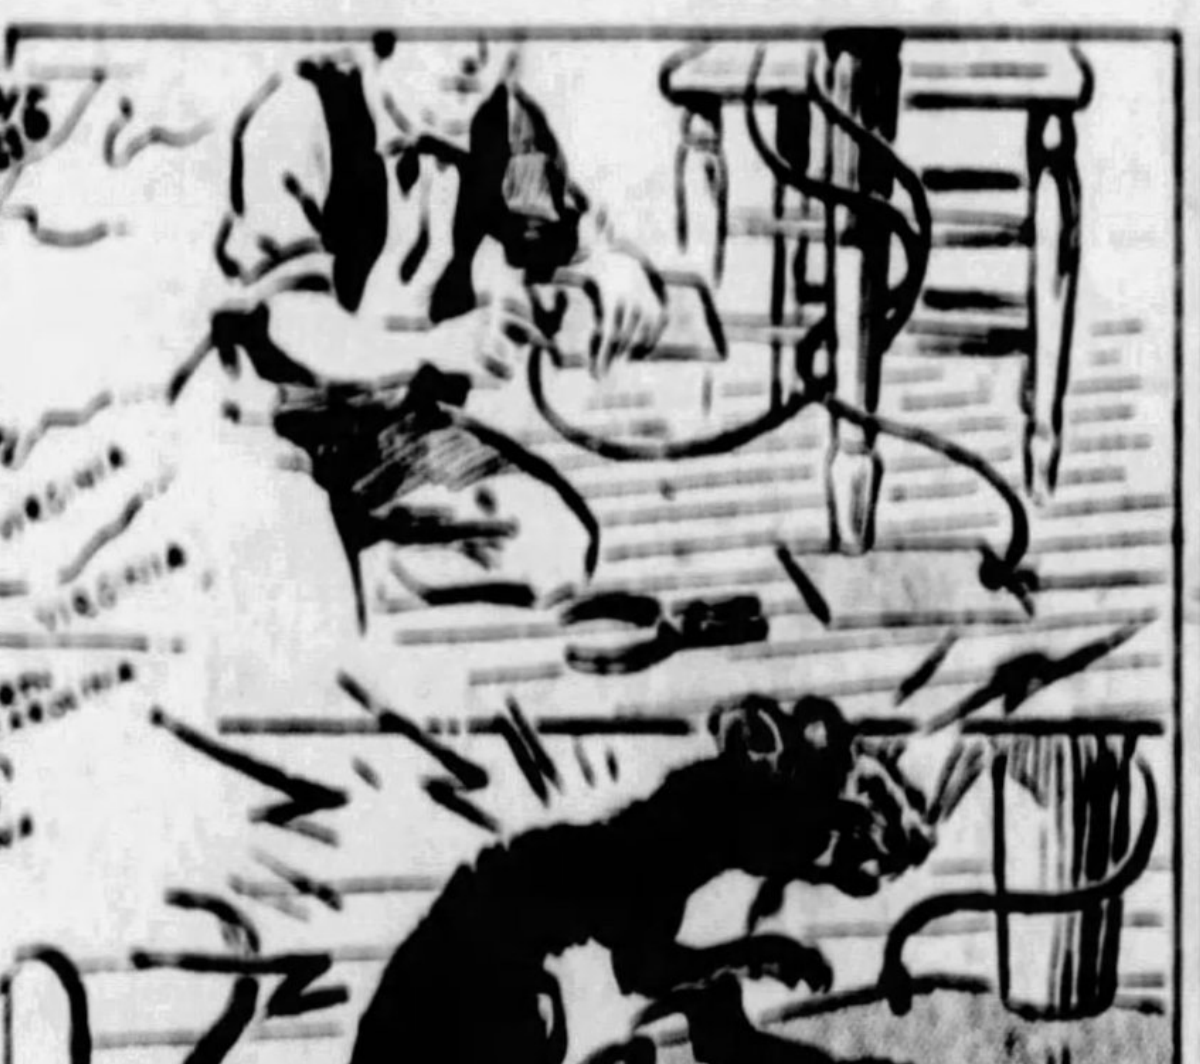
(Authorized and Endorsed by Mr. Edison)

Text by Arthur J. Palmer
Drawings by Frank Kuchenmeister

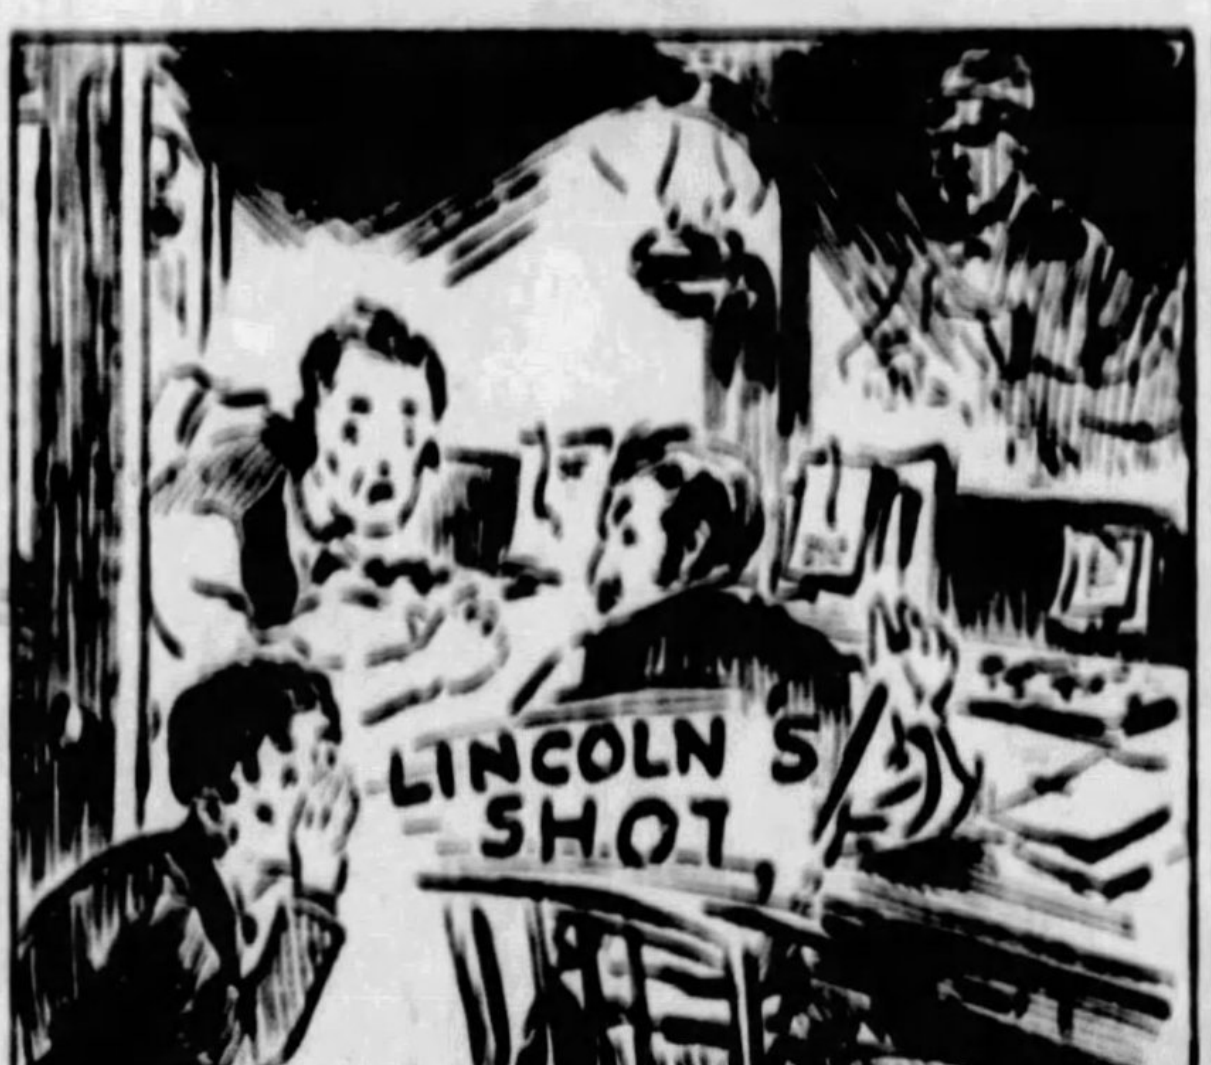


© 1927, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Forced to leave Canada, Edison roamed over the Middle West in search of employment. He traveled from Adrain, Mich., to Detroit, thence to New Orleans, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Louisville and Memphis. The map shows some of the territory covered in five years. Such an experience would have wrecked a less sturdy character.



One of Edison's ingenious applications of the telegraph batteries was his "rat-paralizer." It consisted of two plates connected to the main battery and insulated from each other. When a rat touched one plate with his forefeet and the other with his hind he completed the circuit and departed this life.



A remarkable instance of the mechanical manner in which a veteran operator took news occurred while Edison was in Cincinnati. An excited crowd was in the streets. A messenger boy rushed in shouting, "Lincoln's shot!" An operator had taken the message so perfunctorily he had not even realized its significance.

At first, Edison's rating at the Cincinnati office was that of a "plug" or inferior operator. But the ambitious youth seized every opportunity for improvement until the manager, after a critical examination of his "copy," gave him the Louisville wire, jumping him from plug to "first-class man."
